WASHINGTON AND COLUMBIA'S CEN-TENNIAL.

Not Only One Hundreth Anniversary o the First Meeting of the General Assembly but also of Washington's Southern Tour.

[Southern Christian Advocate] The city of Columbia will celebrate next May the one-hundreth anniversary of the first meeting of the General Assembly of South Carolina in this place as the capital of the State. General Wade Hampton will deliver an oration; there will be a trade's d'splay and probably a military encampment; the city will be decorated and illuminated at night; water will be turned into the great canal and many other attractions will be offered the visitor and sight-seer during the three days of the celebratton.

In addition to the meeting of the Legislature, there was another occurence in the city of Columbia in May, 1791 that deserves a passing notice. During that monin President George Washing on made his first and only visit to this State, and spent several days in Coic.noia-from Sunday, May

The President left Philadelphia (then the capital of the United States) on Monday, March 21st, 1791. Mrs. Washington and her two grandchildren accompanied him to Mount Vernon, where they spent the time during his Southern tour. He reached Mount Vernon on his return June 12th, "having made a most satisfactory journey of more than seventeen hundred miles, in sinty-six days, with the same team of horses." In his diary he says: "In this tour I was accompanied by Major Jackson. My equipage and attendance consisted of a chariot and four horses drove in hand, a light baggage wagon and two horses, four saddle horses, besides a led one for myself, and five, to wit: my valet de chambre, two footmen, coachman and postillion."

The route of the President through our State was as follows: Leaving Wilmington, N. C., Tuesday, April 26th, 1791, he "crossed the boundary line between North and South Carolina about half after 12 o'clock" on the following day. His course was through Georgetown to Charleston, and then by Savannah to Augusta, Ga. We copy his diary for a few days, beginning at this point :

Sain day, 21, (May, 1791.)

"Left Augusta about 6 o'clock, and taking leave of the Governor and principal gentlemen of the place at the bridge over Savannah River where they had assembled_for the purpose, I proceeded in company with Colonels Hampton and Taylor and Mr. Lithgow, a committee from Columbia, (who had come on to meet and conduct me to that place), and a Mr. Jameson from the Village of Granby, on my route.

"Dined at a house about twenty miles from Augusta, and ledged at one Odem's, about twenty miles farther."

Sunday, 22d.

"Rode about twenty-one miles to breakfast, and passing through the Village of Granby, just below the first falls in the Congaree (which was passed in a flat-bottomed boat at a rope ferry,) I lodged at Columbia, the newly adopted seat of the government of South Carolina, about three miles from it on the North side of the river, and twenty seven from my breakfasting

"The whole road from Augusta to Columbia is a pine barren of the worst sort, being hilly as well as poor. This circumstance, added to the distance length of the stages, want of water and heat of the day foundered one of my horses very badly.

"Beyond Granby, four miles, I was met by several gentlemen of that place and Wynnesborough, and on the banks of the river on the North side by a number of others, who escorted me to Columbia.

Monday, 23d.

"Dinned at a public dinner in the State House with a number of gentlemen and ladies of the town of Columbia and country round about to the amount of more than one hundred and fifty, of which fifty or sixty were of the Tuesday, 24th.

"The condition of my foundered horse obliged me to remain at this place, contrary to my intention, this day also.

"Columbia is laid out upon a large been placed on the river below the falls. It is now an uncleared wood, with very few houses in it, and those all wooden ones. The State House (which is also of wood) is a large and you have eighty of them in the comcommodious building, but unfinished. pany's stables, and forty-three back in The town is on dry, but cannot be called high ground, and though surrounded by piney and sandy land is cannot find him anywhere." itself good. The State House is near fluence of the Broad River and Saluda. superintendent. From Granby the river is navigable for grain; when at its usual heighth less, roared with laughter.

and always some. The river from hence to the Wateree below which it takes the name of Santee, is very crooked, it being, according to the computed distance, near four hundred miles. Columbia from Charleston is one hundred and thirty miles.

Wednesday, 25th.

"Set out at 4 o'clock for Camdenthe foundered horse being led slowly on-breakfasted at an indifferent house, twenty-two miles from the town, (the first we came to,) and reached Camden about 2 o'clock, fourteen miles farther, when an address was received and answered. Dined late with a number of gentlemen and ladies at a public dinner. The road from Columbia to Camden, excepting a mile or two at each place, goes over the most miserable pine barren I ever saw being quite a white sand and very hilly. On the Wateree, within a mile and a half of which the town stands, the lands are very good. They culture corn, tobacco and indigo. Vessels carrying fifty or sixty hhds. of tobacco come up to the ferry at this place, at which there is a tobacco warehouse."

To the Sunday-School Workers of the State.

DEAR FR. ENDS: - The Executive Committee of the South Carolina Sunday-school Association in a recent meeting ordered that the -th annual convention of said association be called to meet at Laurens C. H., S. C., at 8 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, March 31st, 1891, to continue until Thursday evening, April 2nd, 1891.

It is important that there be a full representation from every county Sunday-school convention in the State, and the officers of said county conventions are hereby earnestly requested to take steps at once to have a full delegation at this meeting.

Please confer with delegates elect forthwith, and if not possible for them to be present, see the alternates and if they cannot, then get up a delegation of faithful men and women who are alive to the Sunday-school work. Surely there will not be a single county unrepresented in this convention. It will be at a place convenient from every part of the State and at a time most suitable for all.

The Executive Committee are now in correspondence with the railroads of the State for special rates, and the same will be announced at the earliest pos-

Mr. Wm. Reynolds, of Peoria, Illinois, of the International Executive Committee, one of the livest and most progressive Sunday-school men of this country, who is also well known to many of the workers in this State, will be present. Mrs. W. F. Crafts, of New York, one of the most earnest lady workers in the primary or infant class department, and well known to Sunday-school workers as the author of Letters to Primary Class Teachers," will also accompany Mr. Reynolds.

These visitors are sent out by the Internatioal Executive Committee, and will add very much to the other interesting features of the meeting. There will be discussions of and addresses on many subjects of interest to Sunday-school workers, participated in by speakers from various parts of our own and other States.

The music of this meeting will be conducted by one of the best leaders in the State, assisted by a well-drilled local choir. The programme is being prepared and will be published at an All things point to a pleasant and profitable annual meeting. Let the friends of the Sunday-school cause pray for the presence of the Holy Spirit that much good may result to the honor and glory of His name.

Yours, very truly, CHAS. H. CARLISLE, Chairman of Es. Com., Spartanburg, S. C.

Senator Butler on Silver.

[Charleston World.] COLUMBIA, February 25 .- Mr. Jasper Miller recently wrote to Senator Butler in regard to the free coinage of silver. To-day he received a reply, in which Senator Butler says:

I voted for the bill in the Senate. and, of course, will do what I can to secure its passage in the House, although I must say the prospect is not promising. I think it is to be regretted that the commercial bodies of the country, in South Carolina as well as elsewhere, have not made their wishes known to Congress in this regard. It is too late now for this session, but I trust by the assembling of Congress in December, your board of trade and such other commercial bodies as you may be able to influence, will present their views fully to Congress.

There can be no doubt of the fact that a larger volume of currency is essential to the business interests and prosperity of the country, and the free coinage of silver would, in a measure, supply this want.

[Baltimore Sun.] article over carefully, he said that he and the old man is right after us with seeking such a nomination. That was all the truth there was in the whole

It is no secret that when Mr. Cleveland first came to settle down as a private citizen in New York it was his intention to attend to his private business and enter thoroughly into the comforts and joys of private life. He has neld all the highest political honors that his fellow citizens could give him, and the turmoil and contentions of active political life have no attraction for him. Neither is there any fame to be won in another presidential term that would counterbalance the hard work and personal discomfort of four years more in the white house, not to speak at all of the distasteful incidents of a national campaign. This he has never concealed from his friends. He has never made any mystery of it, and those who know how he always insists on telling the whole truth on all matters having long since appreciated the full meaning of his desire to live quietly up to the honors and dignity of a private citizen. The statement, therefore, that his friends have had any

All who knew the man and his record, thoroughly understood that stern call of duty alone could make Mr. Cleveland sacrifice his strong personal disinclination to again enter public life. He is a democrat, strong in the faith and anxious to have the party of popular self government succeed, and once more control the executive offices and the policy of the republic. He has never sought a nomination for any office. But when he was nominated he did all he knew how to have the party that gave him the leadership triumph.

consultation to change his ideas on the subject is manifestly untrue.

The Evening World says: "Col. Dan Lamont was seen at his office in Mills building. He said he did not believe the statement in regard to Mr. Cleveland."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20 .-- There were but few persons at the Capitol to-day who credited the story published in the Washington Post, alleged to have been an authorized statement, to the effect that under no -circumstances will Mr. Cleveland be the democratic candidate for the presidency in 1892. As a matter of course the story formed an interesting topic for political gossip, and it was freely discussed in both wings of the Capitol. No one volunteered to name the gentleman whom Mr. Cleveland authorized to make this startling announcement, but it was said that the story was based on a conversation Senator Carlisle had with Mr. Cleveland several months ago, when the latter is alleged to have said that under no circustances would he seek a renomination, and he would not accept it if tendered unless it came backed up by a practically unanimous request of the democratic party. It was further said that he does not propose to stand in the way of any other gentleman whom the party may deem more available, but there was nothing in his conversation to indicate that he is not willing to be governed by the sentiment of his party so far as the nomination is concerned. Senator Carlisle was not at the capital, but few of his associates take any stock in the story. A senator, who is very close to Mr. Carlisle personally, said he heard it said several months ago that Mr. Cleveland had intimated in a conversation with Mr. Carlisle that there were many disagreeable features in connection with the occupancy of the white house, some of which were very distasteful to Mrs. Cleveland. This is the nearest any one would come to comfirming the story. An Eastern congressman, whose personal and political relations with Mr. Cleveland are most friendly, called upon Mr. Cleveland in New York recently, and in the course of conversation the presidential question came up. There was nothing said which could be construed in a declination of the the nomination. On the contrary, Mr. Cleveland left the impression upon his visitor that he (Mr. Cleveland) expected to be the democratic nominee in 1892, and appeared confident of democratic success. The congressman in question confided this fact to a few of his personal friends upon his return to the capital, and none of Mr. Cleveland's sul porters in Congress have any reason to doubt that he will be their leader in the next campaign. It will be remembered that about a year before the meeting of the democratic convention of 1888 it was said on the authority of a senator that Mr. Cleveland would they managed to break away from the not be a candidate for re-election. This men in charge, and ran like wild ani- story was promptly denied from the white house.

SAYS WILL LIVE FOREVER. A prominent Savannahian, formerly superintendent of a railroad, says: was crippled in my feet and arms so that I could not walk without crutches, nor eat without having a servant to feed me. I tried physicians everywhere, but to no purpose, and finally went to New York, where my doctors, at one time, decided to amputate my arm, but found that course impracticable, on account of a wound I had received during the war. I returned to Savannah a complete wreck, and my case seemingly hopeless. As a forlorn hope I began to take P. P., and am rejoiced to say that after using three bottles, my limbs began to straighten out, my appetite and health soon returned, and I now feel like a new man; really as if I had been made over again, and as if I could live forever—so long as I can get P.
