A BIG SCHEME.

NEWBERRY, S. C.

The Farmers' Alliance Ask the Wheat Growers to Hold Back the New Crop Till Prices Are Booming.

CHICAGO, July 7 .- A great scheme has been devised by somebody within the Farmers' Alliance. It is proposed to withold this year's wheat crop from market until the farmers can get their own price, or at least a price considerably above the average.

The plan is unfolded in a circular of advice through accredited official channels to all members of farmers' organizations in the United States. It suggests a great combination of the 6,000,000 members of farmers' organizations, and has the relative importance and force of an official order for a strike among the 1,000,000 members of the Federation of Labor or the 500,000 members of the Knights of Labor. The circular, which is presumed to be a secret document, is now ready for mailing, and it will be sent to the 2,000,000 members of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, the 1,000,000 members of the colored National Farmers' Alliance, the 1,000,000 members. If the National Farmers' Alliance of the North, the 800,000 members of the Farmers' Mutual Benevolent Association, the 600,-000 members of the Patrons of Husbandry, the Patrons of Industry, and the 150,000 members of the Farmers' League.

The circular is in part as follows: "The Farmers' Alliances demand unanimously that the speculation for future deliveries of cereals shall be prohibited. The greatest competitor of the farmer is the speculator. The speculator sells for delivery in any month of the year, and, therefore, makes it unnecessary for the actual consumer to lay in such stocks as he may consider reasonably sufficient for his requirements. The farmer comes in with actual grain and finds most of his customers supplied by the speculator who but to sell to the elevator man at a

"It is competition between grain and wind, in which the wind had the advantage, as the wind crop is never short. This manipulation has robbed the farmer of this country of $300.000 .-000 in the last three years. This year seems especially designed by Providence to help our farming interest. Our wheat crop promises to be good. The hear the news. Except for the rattle European crops are worse than they and boom a mile above you could have ever have been, and the reserves are heard a pin drop; then he waived his exhausted. Under such circumstances it hat around his head and shouted: is certain that the true value of wheat "Hurrah! hurrah! hurrah! for Jeff was greater than ever before, and it is astonishing that speculators should dare to bet on low prices. This however, explains itself for the following

During the four years from 1884 to 1887 the speculation on low prices was he rede from us up the rise, he had ount of the world's

This success for seven years has made the speculators think that they have discovered the philosopher's stone, and that betting on low prices can always be made to earn them

"There is no doubt that they would ruin themselves by persisting in that policy during the year, as the conditions are entirely reversed; but if our crop rushes into the market right after harvest, there is the danger that most of it will have been sacrificed before the speculation for low prices is broken.

There is, however, a remedy, simple, effective and entirely within your control. The stocks of wheat and flour are hardly large enough to supply the wants of this country until the new crop comes in. If for some reason the rush of new wheat should not come as early as anticipated the market for this crop would start in with double the price you have obtained during the | mightn't I?" last few years.

Could you not act as if early harvest had been prevented, and could you not for once avoid undue haste in supplying the speculator with the means of keeping down your prices? Resolve, for instance, that in view of the condition of the world's crop a minimum price of $1.35 for wheat in New York is moderate and conservative, and that members of your organization pledge themselves not to market their wheat at lower prices unless they are under contract, and that they will use their best efforts with friends and neighbors outside of the organization also to act o your resolution. Resolve, also that the State Alliance form a committee which shall keep itself posted about the state of the world's market, and from time to time notify the farmers of changes taking place, and advise them upon the minimum prices that they may reasonably insist upon."

The circular gives lots of figures and statistics to prove that this scheme would be feasible, and dilates upon the money made on the transactions in futures by speculators. Farmers are told to hold back even when better prices than those suggested are offered they are warned that when the circular is made public speculators will answer by floods of news from all parts of the world, alleging improvement in crops, declining markets and abundant sup-

"This action would be similar to a strike, but with this difference: the workingman loses money every day the strike lasts, while you do not lose anything, and if some should be inconvenienced for a few weeks for ready cash, they will surely not be poorer by The authors of the circular says they feel confident that most farmers will heed their advice and then wind un with the assertion that the minimum drice they suggest is not at all unreasonable, and that the speculator would certainly want $2 if he had the say. By holding off and marketing gradually the farmers are assured they will soon see their power.

The Peculiar Story Told by a Veteran of

the rotunds of the Kimball House yesterday were telling stories of field and camp during the war, when one of the number gave the following graphic account of the suicide of a Federal officer on the field at Gettysburg.

"It was there," said he, "I saw a Federal officer, chagrined because nothing would stay the retreat of his men, raise his pistol to his head and blow out his brains. It happened on the second day's fight. Gen. Longstreet had just come up with part of his corps from Chambersburg, Pa., and vigorously assailed Sickles' corps, which he was driving back in great disorder. Sickles halted and formed his men in line to receive Longstreet's onslaught.

"It was one of the few times I ever saw corps commanders at the front line. Sickles, with his staff, was riding among his men, encouraging them to withstand the Confederate assault, while Longstreet, with his staff, and Col. Freemantle, an English officer and correspondent of the London Times, were cheering our boys to the charge.

"We advanced and gave the Federals a terrific volley at close range. They staggered under the galling fire, when Longstreet ordered us to give them the bayonets. As the men wavered and broke to run, an officer stepped to the front, and with his sword, signalled them to come back. Again and again he waved to his men, but by this time they were in full run, and the officer, in his angry mortification, raised a pistol to his head and fired. When Gen. Longstreet and Col. Freemantle rode up, they looked down at the brave Union officer, but the tide of battle swept us

A SIMILAR CASE.

To the Editor of the Press: Your item in Sunday's Press headed "Suicide in Battle" reminds me of a suicide I witnessed at the first battle of Fredericksburg-it was at Franklin's crossing, below the city. We had the pontoon bridge nearly across when a line of the enemy's skirmishers drove us from our work, and were themselves promised to deliver. He has no choice in turn driven away by our artillery po-ted on the high bank behind us. Just then an officer on the other side rode down into a garden near the river, and our men commenced to fire at him. He waved his hat and commanded: "Stop that firing!" Every one from that supposed he was a Federal officer, who had made his way down from the column, which we supposed had crossed above, so we waited breathlessly to Davis!" I should think a thousand rides cracked at him, but he roce directly round in front of us (the river is very narrow at that point) and up over the rise then back around again, making three circuits, but the last time as slipped from his saddle to the horse's crops being in excess of the demand haunches. When we got across we

THE TRAMP PRINTER.

A Pen Picture of One Who Represents a Species of Queer and Quaint Philosophers and Shrewd Critics.

[From the Palestine (Tex.) Advocate.] He walked silently in. We knew him the moment we raised our eyes and saw him standing there. In fact, we had been expecting him; he nearly always comes when we are in just such a strait and needing him. He always wears the same style of clothes, coat of one kind and pants of another; he hasn't any vest; his shoes are worn out and run down at the heels and his hat is battered and dusty. There are spots over his waistband and his new paper collar is the only fresh, white thing about him and it looks as though he had just put it on with soiled fingers. He is pale, weak-eyed and prematurely gray-haired; he looks as though he had never known regular hours, either for eating or sleeping ; and he must have come thousands of miles and been coming eversince he was a boy.

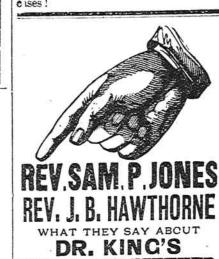

His starting point was so far away and so long ago that he has almost forgotten when or where it was; but we an idea that it must have been when his mother buttoned his little blue shirthand around his white, boyish throat, put on his little white hat, and sent him to work in the printing office. How proud he was when he went home that first night and showed his new brass rule, and tells mother he had learned all the boxes, and has a free ticket to the circus next week, and the editor gave him a big piece of wedding cake, a part of which he had brought home for the baby, and if he sets up a column in one day next week he can go fishing on Saturday. Yes, somewhere about there was the commencement of his long journey, and here he is now, perhaps two-thirds on the way. He asks: "What's the show for a sit?" We give him a case, and by and by he says he feels faint, and asks if we can't lend him a quarter, he hasn't had any breakfast yet. We know his weakness, and, as we need his work, we go down him with him and order some breakfast for him at the nearest restaurant. When he comes back he looks happier and better able to work. In the evening, when he goes to distributing his case, he reconuts the history of his late places of employment. He knows the circulation and amount of business of every paper in the State, and just why the Dispatch suspended, and why the Advocate sold out to the Courier. He is well acquainted with the unknown editor of the Thunderer, and has friends on the editorial force of all the leading journals of the country. By and by he whistles low an air from the Italian opera, and in reply to a question he answers with a Latin quotation. He stays with us a week, and we grow to like him more and more every day. He has read everything rom Shakespeare and Ruskin to Mark Iwain and Bill Arp. He knows more about our laws, National and State, than the best lawyers in the city. He f well acquainted with the life of every eminent person of his age, and is a perfect encyclopedia of current events. But we cannot afford to keep him any longer, so we may pay him off, and again he starts on that long road that leads-not to home, for he has none; not to the society of intelligent people like himself, for outside of the printing office he is unknown; maybe back to night work on some city daily, or, if too worn and old for that, a rapid descent from one country office to another, with whiskey and laudanum for companions, to an unmarked grave by some lonely wayside.
