That "Tired Feeling." The newspapers are having a good deal of fun nowadays over that "tired feeling," so much spoken of in medical adverttsements, in connection with the ill-health of females. It may be a source much that it wasn't suitable for us to of hilarity to witty paragraphers, but be present. not so to suffering women, who by overwork, and a disregard of the laws of health, have lapsed into a condition bordering on invalidism. What most women need is to be relieved of some of the slavish work that is piled on them, and a free, but judicious use of streng thening tonics, such as P. P. P. Sunday Trains to be Put On the C. & G. Road. [The State, 9.h.]

There will be an important innovation in this State next Sunday, resulting in great benefit and convenience to the travelling public of this State and other States

Never has a passenger train been run over the Columbia and Greenville road on Sunday and the only attempt-to run a special excursion on the upper portion of the line made about six years ago-was promptly put down by the Railroad Commission. But next Lemon Phosphate if you want to keep Sunday the regular trains, including all but the passenger train between Laurens and Newberry, will begin to run on this road on Sunday the same as any other day. This is done in order to keep up the connections of the new quick schedule for Atlanta which has just been arranged to put a person leaving here in the morning in Atlanta on the evening of the same day, as already published in the State.

There has been an idea for many years that the charter of the Columbia and Greenville road would not allow the running of trains on the road on Sunday, but The State has the above on the authority of one of the officials of the road, and he says that the charter has no such provision, and the only probable result that will come from the inauguration of the Sunday trains will be the loss of some land granted originally to the road.

The new arrangement will be a boon to the traveling public and Columbia's railway advantages will be proportionately increased.
