VARIOUS AND ALL ABOUT.

The election next Tuesday. Newberry has 3,506 names on her poll list.

A good many Newberrians have gone to Charleston to take in Gala week.

The thermometer was down to 33 on Monday morning and there was ice in Newberry.

Only ten days to the State Fair. The railroad fare is very cheap, and many people will take advantage of it.

Mr. Julian Wright, of Tyler'sville, Laurens County, expects to leave next week for Houston, Texas, where his brother George is. Julian will go into business there.

The Commissioners of State Elections for Newberry County have appointed Frank Baxter one of the managers of State elections at Newberry in place of Wm. H. Hunter.

Duncan Wallace, of Newberry, has been elected to deliver the oration before the literary societies of Watford College at their annual celebration on Friday night, November 15.

Next Sabbath, the 1st of November, Rev. Wm. Hayne Leavelle will preach at Smyrna at 11 o'clock. After the sermon the communion of the Lord's supper will be administered. All are invited.

Next Monday is sale day. There is considerable land to be sold and no doubt there will be a large crowd in town. The Herald and News would like to see many of its friends at the office.

Mr. E. A. Scott has been appointed local agent of the News and Courier at Newberry, Mr. Claude Greepker having resigned his position. The News and Courier extends its very fortunate in having secured the services of so excellent a representative as Mr. Scott.—News and Courier, 1st.

AFTER THE WRONG MAN.

The Republican Scheme to Raise Campaign Funds.

Last Friday Mr. R. C. Williams received a letter from ex-Congressman Ewart, of Asheville, North Carolina, stating, in the shape of a request, that he would be glad to receive $10 from Mr. Williams for campaign purposes, and enclosing a beautiful green certificate with the signature of Mr. Lincoln on it and telling Mr. Williams that upon receipt of the money the certificate would be filled out and returned to him.

Mr. Williams didn't like the idea of receiving such a communication, as he had always been a Democrat, and at first was rather angry about it, but when it was suggested that it was probably intended for R. E. Williams, he became reconciled and returned it to the postoffice and it was forwarded to R. E. Williams.

The letter was registered and stated that the money could be sent to Columbia or Washington, and Mr. Williams thinks it named several other places.

It would seem from this that the Republican officeholders are being assessed in the shape of a request for campaign expenses. R. E. Williams is a candidate of some of the distilleries near Walhalla.

"We also have information that the postmaster at Laurens was down a day or two ago to see the postmaster at Goldville, and told him that all the postmasters had been assessed for campaign purposes, and that his proportion was $6 and some cents. The Goldville P. M. said up. At that rate they will raise a pretty big sum.

AN IMPRESSIVE FAREWELL SERVICE.

Rev. W. C. Schaeffer Delivered His Final Discourse Sunday Night—The Lutheran Church Filled With a Devotional Congregation Touching Occasion.

It was a lovely Lord's Day evening—the last October Sunday—and from every congregation, as well as outside the churches, came the friends of the departing minister to hear his last words and bid him an affectionate adieu.

The sanctuary was radiant in the spiritual grace, inspiration and oneness of the hour, through all which a sense pervaded. The church was grooved with floral offerings; at the sacred desk sat Dr. G. W. Holland, President of Newberry College, and Dr. J. S. Cozby, pastor of Columbia Presbyterian church, and in the chancel were seated Professors J. B. Fox and W. C. Sligh.

A double quartette opened the exercises with a beautiful anthem, which was followed by the very appropriate hymn, "The Invitation to the World."

The invocation was then made by Dr. Holland, who likewise read the lesson. The second hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," was announced by Prof. Sligh.

"We believe, therefore have I spoken," Psalm 116:10; "We believe and therefore speak," 2 Cor. 4:13—these, the true basis of religion. Mr. Schaeffer began with a beautiful and appropriate remark: "The demand that is made in every kind of work is for a genuine product." By way of illustration he regretted the possibility of a false portrait of Columbus which the government proposes to have made in commemoration of the discovery of America.

What is true in secular works and ways is presented in religious life. The speaker's experience should be the product of sincerity. Our testimony must proceed from conviction to be of any real value.

In passing from a review of the principles which form the true basis of religion, Mr. Schaeffer considered the perplexing variety of beliefs among men—alien, hostile, false forms of the true; those begotten of ignorance and error and those of a positive nature, that the only religious result of value comes from the deep conviction of the soul. A profound knowledge of eternal truth leads to humility and a modesty which retreats into the silence and the secret of the heart.

The speaker emphasized the interplay between belief and testimony. The early fathers and confessors gave their testimony before tribunals that was not shaken. The best products of the ages were from hearts and minds aflame with divine truth.

Columbus believed, therefore he embarked, in the face of universal opposition and the scorn of his contemporaries, to sail across the ocean to a world unknown seas. The day that he sailed away by faith from Palos, and not the day on which he planted the Cross upon the strand of the New World, should be made famous in song and story.

Tennyson, England's sweet singer, who now sleeps in the silence of the great cathedral, in the seclusion and retirement of his beautiful life caught the spirit of the Cross. He voiced it in immortal song.

The paternal character of God and the redeeming work of the Son of Man were happily touched upon—the Cross of Christ was the expropriation of Love.

Mr. Schaeffer contrasted the opposite beliefs of the brilliant Frenchman, Renan, and that of the great apostle to the Gentiles. The former admitted, in the hands of the world, that he perishes, we disappear, but the march of time goes on forever, while he of the Pauline faith triumphantly declared, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day."

In a brief review of his own life, Mr. Schaeffer spoke of the cardinal doctrine of the Church's exaltation and the joys of the true believer; that our Father in heaven had made this beautiful world for our good and created us for his own glory; had destined us to every blessing and to every pleasure, joy and happiness.

The speaker contrasted these with the emptiness—the utter emptiness—of the life into which no celestial light enters, no faith illumines and no power and love abide. He urged his congregation and bearers to make the text their individual sentiment: "I believe, therefore have I spoken."

At the close of the sermon, which was an exceeding service, a very popular, Mr. Schaeffer made brief mention of his five years' ministerial work in the Newberry pastorate—the general courtesy and consideration always shown him and the deep appreciation and would be deeply appreciated and would be deeply appreciated.

His words were tenderly spoken in a subdued tone as he committed them to the protection of the Holy Trinity, and prayed that God would be with his people and that his providence they might meet again, his providence they might meet again, his providence they might meet again.

Dr. Cozby begged a few moments' indulgence before offering the last prayer, in which he said that he could never get the ties that bound him to his brother without a word or two of regret at parting. His words were tender and touching—a pleasing incident of the occasion.

The last hymn, given out by the pastor, was sung with sweet and happy effect.

Mr. Schaeffer pronounced the benediction, and for the first time during the trying ordeal betrayed the emotions that filled his heart. It was the first time since a sacred and beautiful service.

THE MORNING SERVICE. As the evening service was the final farewell of the retiring pastor to those of his own people possibly hindered from the morning service, as well to the community at large—it being a public and a private affair—the pastor's mind naturally turned to the varying scenes and incidents of the hastening years—the weeks, months and seasons in which he broke the bread of life to hungering hearts, cheered the despondent, and offered consolation to the sorrowing, were all grouped in the bright picture with its sombre shadow brought the tear of relief!

In a brief review of his work Mr. S. said that $9 members were added to the church. Collections by the congregation, $7,261.75; benevolence, $801.96—total, $8,063.71.

He thanked the congregation for its devotion to him; the officers of the church for their sympathy and support; the faculty of the college for its gracious helpfulness, and the students for their considerate attention and responsive aid; to the choir and its faithful punctual attendants, led by Peter Robertson, he expressed kind words of appreciation.

Knowing that this day he would possibly speak for the last time to some, he prayed heaven's choicest blessing upon all. He would bid adieu to them a neck of God's most precious promises. "Finally, brethren, farewell!" etc. In this very earnest and sympathetic address, in which the pastor's mind naturally turned to the varying scenes and incidents of the hastening years—the weeks, months and seasons in which he broke the bread of life to hungering hearts, cheered the despondent, and offered consolation to the sorrowing, were all grouped in the bright picture with its sombre shadow brought the tear of relief!
