A BONDED WAREHOUSE.

The Business Men of Newberry Take up the Matter—It Will be Built at Once. Just a few days ago the subject of a bonded warehouse for Newberry was talked about just a little. Then it was suggested that it was what we needed, and Mr. G. W. Summer of the firm of Summer Bros. began to stir around with others and agitate the matter. Estimates for the building were secured and a meeting of the business men was called for Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Council Chambers. The meeting was well attended and by men who are not given to talk, but mean to act when they attend a meeting of this nature. Dr. James McIntosh was called to the chair and Mr. Jno. M. Kinard requested to act as secretary. Dr. McIntosh said in taking the chair that the purpose of the meeting scarcely needed to be stated by him. A bonded warehouse was a thing we needed. It would be a substantial improvement to the town, and one that will do good. Every merchant and every other citizen would be benefited by it. Not only so, but money put in it would be a good investment. The sooner we get it the better. The purpose of the meeting was to act and to act at once. Mr. Geo. W. Summer, who had been active in getting up the meeting, had secured some estimates as to cost of construction, which he read for the information of the meeting. The plan was to build a two-story house, with capacity in each for 1,000 bales of cotton, and so arranged that another section could be added if necessary. It was estimated that such a building would cost from $3,200 to $3,500, including automatic sprinklers and fire extinguishers. The building is to be constructed according to the requirements of the insurance companies, so as to get the minimum insurance on cotton stored. Mr. S. P. Booser said he had written to ascertain the insurance rate on such buildings, but he had not yet received replies, but he thought the rate would not exceed one per cent. Mr. Hunt said he understood that the Southern Railway had some land on which the house could be built, and he asked Mr. Burton if he could give any information. Mr. Burton, agent for the Southern Railway, said he had written Mr. Wells in regard to the matter on request of Mr. Summer, and they would be willing to lease the lot for ten years, the first five years at a nominal rental of one dollar a year. For the next five to be left to arbitration. After the ten years the matter of rental to be left to arbitration. Mr. Burton stated that it was a rule of the railroad not to rent for longer than ten years, but renewal of contracts would cover give any trouble. Mr. Hunt moved that a committee of five be appointed to see if $9,500 in subscriptions could be raised. Chairman appointed O. McL. Holmes, E. M. Evans, B. C. Matthews, M. L. Spearman and Z. P. Wright. On motion a committee of three was appointed to secure plans and specifications and submit to the next meeting. This is to be known as the building committee. The committee is G. W. Summer, Ed. R. Hipp and L. W. Floyd. Dr. Mayer moved that the par value of the shares be $100. This was amended by Mr. Z. P. Wright to make them $50, and the amendment was adopted. Mr. Kinard moved that a committee of three be appointed to look after the legal part of the transaction—arranging the lease, securing the charter and so on. The chair appointed W. H. Hunt, Geo. S. Mower and Geo. Johnstone. The committee adjourned to meet again on Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock. A full attendance of those interested in this enterprise is desired at this meeting. What is to be done is to be done at once. Other towns that do not handle as much cotton as Newberry have these bonded warehouses, and Newberry should not be behind. As a matter of fact, we will soon have one, for the people who are behind this enterprise mean business, and we expect to see work begin on the building next week.

LIFE, DEATH, JUDGMENT.

A Strong Sermon at The First Baptist Church by Dr. Wm. Hayne Leavell, of Texas. As was announced last week Rev. Wm. Hayne Leavell filled the pulpit at the First Baptist church on Sunday morning. He preached again at night at the union service at the Presbyterian church, Newberry should and does feel proud of Dr. Leavell. He is a Newberry boy and has forged to the front and is now preaching to one of the largest congregations in the South in the city of Houston, Texas, and stands in the front rank of pulpit orators in the entire country. The pastorates he has occupied is evidence of this, otherwise he could never have sustained himself. He preached for several years in Boston. In social life he is pleasant and jovial and is sure to win friends wherever he goes. We never miss an opportunity when he comes on visits to Newberry to hear him preach. Both sermons on Sunday were strong in their simplicity and in the force of their delivery. We give a full synopsis of the sermon on Sunday morning. It was from the text, "It is appointed unto men once to die, and then the judgment." The subject was Life, Death, Judgment. He spoke in part as follows: In recent years too much emphasis has been lifted from the more somber aspects of our religious faith. Since men learned to interpret the "lake of fire" and the "worm that dieth not" as metaphorical descriptions of a moral situation, the warnings of fear have had a less full and less clear utterance. The full throated cry of the old preachers seems to be fading more and more into a distant echo. The less distinct the receding echo becomes the more positive grows our hope that men have been too long frightened by their ghostly fathers in the Gospel. We begin to think that since it is physically impossible for there to be anywhere in God's universe a real lake of fire and a literal worm that grows on ever more, it is also spiritually impossible for there to be any moral conditions of which such figures of speech are right and true representations. This modification of the ancient views of hell has weakened our fear of future suffering, which has in turn diminished our fear of doing evil. It is time for one to pause in solemn consideration when he reduces the hopes of his faith to the low level of a mere desire to escape the torments of hell; time to review a spiritual condition which makes it possible to see in the sacrifice of Jesus Christ nothing more than a benevolent effort to save men from future suffering. A man who serves God from fear of hell would serve the devil just as devoutly if he should become convinced that the punishments of the devil were more terrible than the punishments of God. Fear of a future hell is neither the highest nor best nor worthiest nor most powerful influence toward Godly living. To love God because he first loved us; to answer love with love; to serve Christ because he first served us; to answer service with service; seems to me not only more worthy, but more powerful incentives to faith and Godly living. But the warnings are there—and cannot be over-looked. They are uttered by the same voice, penned by the same hand, rest upon the same authority. There are three things which the text emphasizes as important and undeniable—life, death, and judgment. To live is a great boon and it is a great responsibility. We are not here for existence merely but that we may live. To a man in full possession of his faculties life in this world is a great thing of mighty moment, for in his hands lie the issues of immortality. Life with all its responsibilities, because of its responsibilities, is a great task and a great pleasure. The man who has no sense of responsibility does not live, does not know the first syllable of the meaning of life. We live but must die: "All that lives must die. Passing through nature to eternity." There is a sense in which man never dies. It is the confident belief of the Christian that death is but the agent which opens the gates into an existence that has no end. But in another sense all who live must die—die out of this world. Into some of your homes perhaps the black robed messenger has folded his sable wings and gone away in the company of your children, your husbands, your wives, your parents or some one whom you loved. The gentle, who make life sweet and winsome shedding peace and beauty everywhere, die. The brave, afraid of no fear and offering service where danger full armed stands, die. The young whose eyes are full of hope and whose heart is full of blood, die. All die. Men have lived to a ripe old age—Mehushalah seemed to defy death, but he died. Men have been rich and powerful enough to buy almost everything but they could not buy continued life—they died. All men die not so much because they want to as because they have to. They die by appointment. God made the appointment and he always keeps his appointments. It is appointed unto men once to die. Some of you are dilatory and are often exasperatingly and incessantly late about meeting your appointments. Why it is I can never understand that so few people are ever prompt and so many are always slow. This appointment they will meet on time exactly and sharply on the hour. Some of you are unreliable, you will make appointments and not make the situation bend to your appointments. You are not to be counted on—never fulfilled a promise with enough certainty to give anybody hope you will fulfill another. But this is an appointment you will meet whether you ever meet any other or not. The hour, place, and circumstances of your appointment to die you will meet surely and unavoidably. It is an appointment with God and you'll not escape it. To this appointment you will go in person and go on time. We believe that death in itself is not the end—that there is something after death. It is wise for us who must die to ask, since death does not end all, what comes after death? The inspired writer whose words we have for a text, says that after death comes judgment. "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment." I believe it on the authority of the word of God, on the universal conviction and the universal fear of the human heart, on the analogy of things here in this world. It is a reasonable belief that the uncorrected disorders of society which go here too often unwhipped of justice shall some day and somewhere meet a just fate unless infinite justice is a myth. What law here can punish the hypocrite who steals the livery of heaven to serve the devil in? He may go to his end undiscovered—altars may be erected in his honor, panegyrics compose his eulogy, and flowers be scattered over his tomb. Is there a God of justice in heaven and no justice to overtake this man? Is there a human law to punish ingratitude? Shall the man who turns upon his benefactor always and everywhere go unpunished? Shall gross ingratitude, one of the most heinous of human vices, never be lodged? We have life, we have death, we have judgment. The question of first and supreme importance to us is what are we doing in life, before death, to meet the inevitable judgment? Will it be a sentence of mercy? Will He say to us "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels?" Or will He say to us, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you?" More than twenty million free samples of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve have been distributed by the manufacturers. What better proof of their confidence in its merits do you want?
