McKINLEY AND ROOSEVELT.

THAT IS THE TICKET NOMINATED AT PHILADELPHIA.

Nominated by Acclamation—The Work Was Quickly Done and Without a Single Ballot.

Convention Hall, Philadelphia June 21.—The convention hall is filling rapidly. Roosevelt is non-committal this morning. He disavows interviews quoting him as ready to accept, but his friends say he will bow to the will of the convention. There is great cheering as Hanna, Depew, Roosevelt and others enter. The Kansas delegation carry a banner claiming they were the first to declare for Roosevelt.

After all of the smoke of the skirmish of the last few days the convention hosts awake with a common belief that McKinley and Roosevelt would be the ticket of 1900. The exciting scenes before midnight, the conference of the managers in Hanna's room, the withdrawal of Long, Dilliver and the disappearance of every other obstacle in the path of Roosevelt's triumphant nomination and finally the formal, measured announcement of Senator Hanna that, in his judgment after a complete review of the conditions, Governor Roosevelt should be nominated by acclamation—this series of events dispelled the last vestige of doubt as to the ticket.

As the delegates and leaders appeared in the hotel lobbies they shook hands and congratulated each other like gladiators after a hard fought battle, and all agreed that nothing remained but for the convention formally to carry out what had already been registered as its unmistakable will.

THE GREAT AND EVENTFUL DAY.

This was the great day and long before 10 o'clock, the hour set for the assembling of the convention, the hall was surrounded by an immense army of people who besieged from the doors and entrances, clamoring for admission. When the doors were opened they surged in like a flood submerging the vast hall. The stage had been freshened with green things and at each corner, red peonies shot into the air. The band in the north gallery was at work early with inspiring music. The sun blazed down through the spaces in the roof and the heat gave promise of being impressive.

At 9:57 o'clock the Kansas delegation, with bright silk fan flowers pinned to their lapels, aroused the first enthusiasm as they marched down the main aisle bearing a white banner inscribed in big black letters "Kansas is for Roosevelt."

As the delegates dropped into the pit the utmost good nature was manifested. The contest was over. It was to be a love feast, a jubilee, and not a contest which the day was to witness.

Governor Roosevelt entered at exactly 10 o'clock. He made a rush of it, but he did not escape the keen eye of the thousands and they set up a cheer at sight of him.

He was surrounded by the delegates when he reached the pit and showered with congratulations. He made no protestations or dissent, but smilingly repeated his thanks. All States were represented in the welcome, with Kansas, the indomitable Roosevelt pioneer, leading the demonstration. A few minutes later another outburst greeted the entrance of Senator Hanna. He stopped a moment to chat with Senator Davis and then he reached the standard of the New York delegation, where Roosevelt was holding a reception.

HANNA AND ROOSEVELT THE FAVORITES.

He pushed through the throng and greeted the rough rider cordially. With his hands upon Roosevelt's shoulder he whispered in his ear. For two minutes they remained thus in close communion.

Depew created a stir a little later, but it was Matthew S. Quay who aroused the shouts of the local crowd. Henry Cabot Lodge, the permanent chairman reached the stage at 10:15 o'clock, and there was an interesting conference of the leaders in full view of the vast audience.

At 10:20 o'clock the big band from Canton, O., made its way to the hall and broke out with the peeling strains of the national anthem. The whole audience rose to its feet and remained standing until it was concluded.

As the anthem closed Chairman Lodge announced the opening invocation by Archbishop Ryan.

The distinguished prelate wore the superb purple robe of his high station, falling to his feet, and upon front showing the heavy chain and golden cross, emblematic of his office. He paused until the assembly had risen and bowed their heads, and then his strong, rich voice rolled out a prayer filled with a sentiment of the responsibility resting upon the party here assembled.

When the striking figure of the archbishop, with the finish of the prayer, disappeared in the throng on the stage, the gavel fell to make quiet for the more practical work of the convention.

QUAY WITHDREW HIS AMENDMENT.

Mr. Quay announced the withdrawal of the amendment proposing a change in rules 1 and 2, referring to representation in National conventions. This was accepted by the Southern delegates as a concession to them and they arose en masse, cheering wildly at the withdrawal of the proposition.

Mr. Lodge advanced to the front of the platform and said:

"Under the rules nominations for the office of President of the United States are now in order. The State of Alabama is recognized."

A tall and swarthy Alabamian stood on his chair and by prearrangement answered:

"Alabama yields to Ohio."

This was the signal for the recognition of Senator Foraker, who made the speech renominating Mr. McKinley as the Republican candidate for President. Then the cheers began and a wild scene ensued.

FORAKER NOMINATES McKINLEY.

Amid a tumult of applause Senator Foraker went to the platform and when quiet was restored began to speak, first thanking Alabama for their courtesy in yielding, but attributing the fact to the overwhelming popularity of the candidate. As Mr. Foraker continued he was repeatedly interrupted with cheers. His announcement that the nomination of McKinley was equal to an election in November brought vociferous cheers.

Briefly Senator Foraker adverted to the record of the President in peace and in war as one of the most remarkable in American history.

"In war and in peace," said he, while the delegates and spectators echoed the refrain of the sentiment expressed, "he has been found equal to all extraordinary requirements. In all American history there has been no chapter more brilliant than that written by the United States with him as chief."

Foraker continued his speech at 11:15 a. m., and the audience went wild for McKinley. Banners were caught up and waved, the band played and there was great rejoicing. The demonstration lasted fifteen minutes.

Roosevelt took the platform. The uproar was renewed and lasted five minutes. Roosevelt said he rose to second the nomination. Somebody applauded every word he spoke.

Thurston followed, and Yorks, of Kentucky, also seconded the nomination. Delegates howled for the vote but Lodge recognized Knight, of California, who also seconded the nomination. McKinley was nominated at 12:50 by acclamation amid wild cheering and great demonstration.

ROOSEVELT FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

Chairman Lodge ordered the call of the roll for the nomination of vice-president.

Alabama yielded to Young, of Des Moines, Iowa, who withdrew Dilliver and nominated Roosevelt. Murray, of Massachusetts, withdrew Long and seconded Roosevelt. At 2 p. m. Roosevelt was nominated by acclamation.

MRS. ROOSEVELT PRESENT.

Among the early arrivals at the hall were Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. She sat in the front row on the east side of the hall and was the cynosure of thousands of eyes.

At 2:29 p. m. the convention adjourned.

CONVENTION AFTERMATH.

Philadelphia, June 21.—The McKinley Roosevelt ticket was overshadowed from the first. No one raised any opposition to either the Presidential or Vice Presidential nomination. At 2:12 o'clock this afternoon the work already cut out for the convention was done and the convention adjourned sine die. There was no opposition to the prearranged over any question. The only sign of importance shown by any delegates was when they became surfeited by the oratory of the eulogists of McKinley.

McKinley was put in nomination by Foraker. His speech was followed by a demonstration of enthusiasm lasting sixteen minutes. For Roosevelt the convention made a demonstration that outshone that for McKinley. When the roll of States was called and McKinley was declared the unanimous candidate, there was little enthusiasm, because the climax was anticipated. Immediately the roll of States was called for nomination of Vice President. Iowa withdrew Dilliver and named Roosevelt. Massachusetts withdrew Long and seconded the nomination of Roosevelt. Depew captured the convention with a witty speech, and Roosevelt became the nominee. Nine hundred and twenty-nine votes were cast for him. He received every vote except his own.

The convention declared for imperialism and McKinley, and the party will fight the campaign on these lines. The national committee met after the convention and elected Hanna chairman, and Col. Dick Elrod temporary secretary. Headquarters of the committee will be established in Chicago and New York, as in the campaign of 1896.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON.

McKinley has sent following telegram to Roosevelt: "Your unanimous nomination is a high and deserved honor. I beg to extend my hearty congratulations."

Wofford College Commencement.

Spartanburg is an ideal place for a commencement (excepting Newberry, however). A progressive town, good railway connections, a hospitable populace and home of belle society combine to make a stay there pleasant. The writer and a few others from Newberry went up on Saturday to attend the commencement. Being comfortably situated we had every opportunity of enjoying it.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 p. m., Instructor Leithner and a band of his expert athletes gave an exhibition in the gymnasium. It consisted of feats of muscle, etc. Bishop Duncan in commenting on it said that he felt as if he had several broken bones by looking on. Mr. D. A. Boyd, son of Rev. D. P. Boyd, acted the farce clown to the amusement of all.

Sunday morning, at 11 a. m., Bishop A. W. Wilson delivered the baccalaureate sermon from Daniel 1:8. The preacher held up to the young men Daniel as a model type of life, while at the same time he intimated a doubt that likely he is an ideal creation. A characteristic turn of the discourse was his sarcastic approval of "aristocrats." An attempt even to give a sketch is impossible. It was scholarly, logical and yet plain.

At 8:30 p. m., Sunday evening the people repaired to the central Methodist church to hear Pres. Jas. H. Carlisle. His subject was "Misunderstanding God." After distinguishing between not understanding and misunderstanding he proceeded along lines of misunderstanding God's power, his love, and his wisdom. He gave the young men warning that although they might misunderstand everything else not to misunderstand their religion and make a failure. This grand old man of Spartanburg is always listened to attentively.

Hon. John R. Abney, of New York, read a lecture before the literary societies Monday morning on the subject, "Our Civilization." The speaker brought out many examples of the current inconsistencies of our government in our treatment of the Tories, Indians, etc., closing with a very arraignment of our governmental administration from the nazvi feat at Manila down to today.

On Monday evening the annual debate between the two literary societies took place. The subject resolved, "That England's course in the Transvaal is justifiable." The affirmative was debated by the representatives of the Preston Society, Messrs. T. H. Daniel and A. E. Deingers. The negative was upheld by the representatives of the Calhoun Society, Messrs. C. E. Peele and W. C. Koper. After a lively discussion it was decided in favor of the affirmative by the committee. The medals offered by the Calhoun and Preston literary societies annually for the best essays were won by Messrs. Gibson and Watkins respectively, and were presented in a happy manner by Messrs. J. H. Abney and J. E. Prince.

Tuesday morning dawned bright, and by nearly ten o'clock the college chapel was filled. While the Spartanburg regimental band was strutting up some lively notes eighteen young men appeared on the stage representing eighteen counties. After listening to twelve speeches—three being excused from speaking—Dr. Carlisle delivered, in a few appropriate words, the diploma and usual gift of a Bible. Another incident connected with commencement was the gift of a bronze tablet in memory of Rev. Benj. Wofford by Dr. H. Baer. When Bishop Duncan, Chairman Board of Trustees, announced that Pres. Carlisle's resignation had been reconsidered or withdrawn for a year at least, and that "Dr. Carlisle is still President of Wofford College" the audience went wild with applause.

Rev. J. W. Kilgore delivered the address before the Alumni Association on Tuesday evening at 8:30 p. m. He spoke on the theme of symmetrical manhood developed under Christian education. He first called attention to the miserable condition of one educated for mechanical purposes alone and who does not develop the finer qualities of humanity. He closed by making an appeal to the alumni to see that Wofford College served to develop that symmetrical Christian manhood. After the address a banquet to the Alumni was served in the Alumni building.

This proved a most enjoyable commencement. If you wish a pleasant outing go to Wofford commencement. The professors and students endeavor to make the stay pleasant. Notwithstanding, although Spartanburg's population is much larger than Newberry's, the audience are not as large as the latter's.

THE PEOPLE'S

FAVORITE TRADING PLACE!

We are more and more convinced every day that our way of doing business is the correct—our buying and selling for cash and selling at a short profit.

MIMNAUGH

Told you six years ago that these credit stores would have to change their way of doing business, You can't sell an article for 40c. that is only worth 25c., nor can you sell an article for $1.50 that is only worth $1.00. That is played out. Neither can you cut time price and time-worn goods a cent or two and meet

Mimnaugh's Cut Prices!

Not that we are hard up—we have plenty of money—but for the purpose of creating a little sensation every article in our store will be sacrificed

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

- 14 yds. Androscoggan Black Cloth for only $1.00
- 25 " 40-inch Sea Island " $1.00
- 27 " 36-inch Black Cloth (without dressing) for only $1.00
