CLINCH HEYWARD OUT FOR GOVERNOR.

THE MAGNETIC MAN OF OLD COLLETON HEARS THE CALL.

An Outline of His Platform—He Will Stand for Peace, Education, Intelligent Immigration, Industrial Progress.

[Special to The State.]

Walterboro, June 14.—Seeing the editorial in this week's issue of the Press and Standard calling upon Capt. D. C. Heyward, of this town, to become a candidate for governor at the next primary, your correspondent called upon him today and asked him whether he contemplated making the race. Capt. Heyward replied that he felt exceedingly gratified that so many of his friends in his own county and throughout the State had expressed to him their desire that he should enter the contest for gubernatorial honors, and that he had decided to do so.

Capt. Heyward was then asked if he would outline to some extent his views upon the political issues which would most probably enter into the next campaign for State offices.

He replied that at this time he knew of no question upon which public attention would center chiefly during the next campaign; that in his opinion the people of the State were closer together than they had been for years. Old wounds had healed and the day had come when the people of South Carolina were doing their own thinking, and were realizing the fact more fully than they had ever done before that those questions which tended to inflame the passions of the people, and thereby retard all industrial development, should be relegated to the rear, and in their stead should be brought to the front such subjects, the discussion of which in calm dignified, and intelligent manner, would result in the material welfare and prosperity of all the people of the State.

When asked to be a little more specific as to the nature of these questions, Capt. Heyward replied that the educational system of the State was far from complete. That there was no subject of greater moment to the people of this State than the education of her youth, and that we ought to exert all our energy to the building up and perfecting of such an educational system as would furnish our boys and girls with an opportunity to fit themselves for the duties and responsibilities of life.

Continuing, he said that the subject of immigration was one which should be given attention by those who have the best interests of the State at heart. That immigration should be officially and systematically encouraged. In this connection he instanced south-western Louisiana and southern Texas now the most prosperous agricultural portions of the South, built up to very great extent by an influx of western farmers, induced to leave their mortgaged farms in search of cheap and productive lands and a more congenial climate. What has been done in Louisiana and Texas, he claimed could be done in South Carolina if the effort was made. Good roads, which were doing so much for North Carolina, and the drainage of our swamps and abandoned land, constituting as they do more than one-fifth of the acreage of the State, should be vigorously looked after. Capital should be encouraged to come into the State and should be made to feel that it was welcome and would be safeguarded by every protection which the law threw around it.

"How about the dispensary?" he was asked.

"That I consider," he replied, "a settled question and one which should not figure in the coming campaign to the exclusion of other important subjects. It has been passed upon again and again by the people of the State, and is a question which every voter should thoroughly understand. Should it be my fortune to be elected governor of South Carolina I would seek to enforce the dispensary law as I would every other law which I found upon the statute books. The office of governor is an executive one.

It is the duty of the governor to see that the laws are enforced, and not to direct what laws the people shall make through the legislative department of the government. Of course, I am mindful of the fact that the constitution imposes upon the governor the duty of suggesting to the law-making department of the government, from time to time, for its consideration such measures as he may deem necessary or expedient, and in this duty I would be prepared to carry out to the best of my capacity. If elected to the high office to which I aspire, I will seek to be the governor of the whole people of South Carolina, and my only aim will be to serve them to the best of my ability and understanding."

COLLETON COUNTY NOMINATES A SON OF WHOM SHE IS PROUD.

There is a strong disposition on the part of many of our people to present to the Democratic voters of the State at the next primary the name of one of our honored citizens, Capt. D. C. Heyward, as a candidate for governor. It is not known positively whether or not Capt. Heyward would consent to make the race, but if he does, he will enter the contest as well equipped and under as favorable conditions as any man who would aspire to that exalted office. He will find the people of his county enthusiastic and aggressive in his support, besides having in almost every county of the State friends who will vote for him, talk for him and work for him.

Capt. Heyward is a man of most pleasing and attractive manners, with a well trained and practical mind, and of exalted character. He is a native South Carolinian and is thoroughly identified with the people of the State in all their relations of life, social, financial and political. He is in no sense a politician, never having been a candidate for any office. Yet he has always taken an active interest in all public questions affecting the welfare of the people and has devoted much time to the study of governmental and political questions. As a public speaker, he is earnest, forceful and aggressive and would make a deep and lasting impression upon our people should he enter the contest and canvass the State.

Such, briefly is the man whom we suggest as the next governor of South Carolina. We have said nothing of him which the most critical examination will not justify. As governor, he would give the people of the State a broad and progressive administration, promoting the interests and welfare of the people in every department of life, and we trust that he will consent to make the race, and we call upon him to do so.

Wanted to Stop Her Talk.

A woman fainted in town yesterday. She came in with her husband to see the circus—any circus is "the" circus, you know. Under the acres and acres of canvas—every circus spreads "acres of canvas," you know—she became suddenly ill, whether at sight of the roaring lion or sound of moaning whang-doodle, was not discovered, but, becoming ill, the woman promptly fainted.

A cab was called hurriedly, and the husband placed his wife in the cab, they were driven hurriedly to the office of a physician. The physician felt of the wife's pulse, tested her heart action, and then, placing a febrile thermometer in her mouth, he bade her close her mouth and keep it shut, she having recovered her senses.

The wife did as she was bidden, and the doctor looked steadily at his watch, his finger on her pulse, and counted; the seconds run into minutes, two minutes—three! And then the husband asked eagerly and anxiously:

"Say, doc, what'll yer take for that thing?" pointing to the thermometer.
"Why?" demanded the physician.
"Cause hits the first time I ever knowed 'er to hol' 'er tongue that long."

MR. FOWLER TESTING RIGHT TO IMPRISON

WHEN THE PRISONER IS WILLING TO BE LOCKED UP.

Last of the "Slavery" Cases—All Those Indicted, Except Fowler, Plead Guilty to Assault and Battery and Arso Felict.

(Special to The State.)

Anderson, June 14.—George Thomas, Willis McGhee, Elias McGhee, indicted jointly with J. S. Fowler for conspiracy, false imprisonment and assault and battery of a high and aggravated nature, plead guilty to assault and battery and were sentenced to pay a fine of $50 each or 30 days on the public works or in the State penitentiary.

J. S. Fowler went to trial this afternoon and a motion was made by his attorneys to quash the indictment. After argument, Judge Klugh quashed the indictment as to conspiracy and into trial on the other two counts. Testimony was taken and the case argued before the jury and court adjourned until tomorrow.

The reasons assigned for accepting the plea of assault and battery in full of the indictment is stated by the solicitor to be that he did not think the State could prove its case as in the other counts. Hammond was indicted in four cases but was fined in only one, which settles the matter in full as to him.

Harriet and Will Owings were found guilty of murder with a recommendation to mercy, and were sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

James Cook, who is an employe of Fowler, received a life sentence.

SENATOR MORGAN ON McLAURIN.

Says Both Tillman and McLaurin are Good Democrats But Inve Political Suicide.

Washington, D. C., May 31.—Senatorial opinions on a personal controversy between the two men who are members of the Upper House and who have warm friends on both sides of the chamber, is of course, difficult to get. There are few Senators in Washington now, and these few read of the resignation of the South Carolinian with a surprise a few days ago. They expressed the opinion today that they felt that both Senators had made a great mistake in falling into a controversy which would involve both so deeply. Both Tillman and McLaurin are blamed by Senators who are their friends, while nearly all the members of the Upper House are too experienced in politics not to understand what a man will do in the heat of such a struggle as now is in progress in South Carolina. Still in their temperate moments, and, as they were today, at their own firesides, they look upon the latest phase of the Senatorial fight in that State as being almost childish in its extremes.

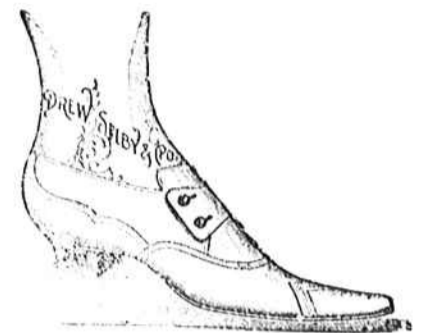

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, said: "Both men are good Democrats. I have no reason to doubt either man, and I consider Senator McLaurin one of the ablest men in the Senate. He is young, he is modest, but he is very able. I cannot think of one instance where McLaurin has had his Democracy challenged. One may vote for or against subsidies—But all Democrats in the Senate vote for a subsidy at one time or another—and still be a true Democrat, I consider the man progressive who faces each and every public question as it comes up and tries to solve it for himself. Yet, we have stereotyped Democrats. This is an opportunity to honor the man who, disagreeing with both the platform and the nominee of his party, does not step over into the ranks of the other party, but prefers to let the issue pass—takes to seclusion and waits, but does not desert his party. I think there are many such Democrats in this country today, and we shall not misjudge them. Therefore no one can say that this man is not a good Democrat or that man is not because he may vote for or against some bill in the United States Senate or in the Lower House which may appear to involve directly the Democratic or Republican principles.

not because Mr. Bryan was on hand working for it, but because I thought it my duty; I talked and argued against the ship subsidy bill because I thought it outrageous and an imposition, but as I spoke against it the Cotton Growers' Association of the South passed a resolution favoring it. That shows there is a diversity of views of this question in the South as well as in the North. I do not think that Senator McLaurin's Democracy can be safely challenged.

"When I read this morning of the two Senators, I thought it peculiar that two men of experience, such as they are, should deliberately invite political suicide and just to see who will be there first at the resurrection. The outcome may be different than either one thinks. While they are struggling for the honors they lay aside now with such little thought, others may appear on the scene and seize both plums."

The Southern Railway—A 20th Century Road.

[Fruit Trade Journal, New York.]

The Southern Railway and its broadminded and energetic officials deserve much congratulation and praise for the improved and efficient train service they have inaugurated on the movement of their fruit and vegetable traffic from this point. It is now their regular schedule to haul perishable freight from Charleston to New York in less than 36 hours, which has already developed the approbation and hearty co operation of the shippers in this territory. A number of growers and shippers have expressed themselves as very well satisfied with the prompt and effective manner in which the Southern Railway anticipated their needs in this direction, and this liberal and progressive policy, together with the vigorous promulgation of the same by the officials of the road, is having a decided upward tendency to stimulate and renew energy in this section, encourage the growers and shippers to increase the acreage next season, with results that will be mutually beneficial to growers shippers consignees and the Southern Railway. The broad-minded and liberal policy thus displayed by the officials of the Southern Railway cannot be too highly praised, and presages the dawn of a progressive era for the fruit and produce shippers in this section, and promises an object lesson to other railroads and officials, which will be worthy of emulation.

The Southern Railway will have good reason to feel proud of their officials when the object aimed at by the latter have been effected by the fruit and vegetable interests.

The results attained are all the more commendable in view of the fact that "climatic conditions" for the past several months have tended to limit the shipments of marketable truck from this section, and prove that concentrated action by those interested in the development of the raising of products is bound to succeed.
