

THE U. C. V. REUNION.

THE U. C. V. REUNION.

The Southern Cross once more has been kissed by the soft Southern breezes. The stainless banner around whose broken staff and tattered folds is the noon-day brightness of a glory given by the life-blood of heroes, once again has floated over the grey legions which love it well.

The annual Reunion of United Confederate Veterans, held at New Orleans last week, was one of the best and most largely attended in the history of the organization.

The closing hour of the convention on Thursday many prominent men were called upon and made short responses. Among these were General Francis T. Nichols, of Louisiana; Governor Frazier, of Tennessee; General George W. Gordon, of Nashville; and ex-Governor Robert Lowry, of Mississippi.

General Joe Wheeler arrived in New Orleans on Wednesday. When he reached the city he wore the regular uniform of a major general in the United States Army, which rank he now holds.

A number of committee reports on general interest were submitted. The credentials committee reported that 242 accredited delegates, including 100 from 17 foreign countries, were present.

The morning session was taken up with addresses of welcome and responses. Governor W. W. Heard spoke for the State of Louisiana. General Gordon was again enthusiastically cheered when he rose to reply.

General Gordon was a few minutes late in reaching the floor of the convention. His attendance was the signal for a demonstration which shook the very building to its foundations.

Pre-eminent during the events of Reunion week shone forth the love of the old soldiers for the Southern cause and for their leaders in the troublous days when they defended it against the onslaught of a world.

But loyal as are the old soldiers to the cause for which they sacrificed so much, as loyal are they to the government to which today they owe their allegiance. There was not the least trace of bitterness or sectional antagonism.

The feature of Wednesday's session were the memorial exercises in honor of the comrades who have crossed over the river. Eloquent tributes were paid their memory, and the sad, sweet notes of the bugle sounding taps ended the session.

On Thursday all the old officers of the organization were re-elected amid scenes of the greatest enthusiasm, and the convention adjourned sine die.

The next Reunion city was left to the executive committee. If suitable railroad rates can be secured, St. Louis will very probably be chosen. If not, Louisville, or possibly Nashville.

In the Newberry party at the Reunion were Sheriff M. M. Buford, Mr. L. M. Speers, Mr. Wm. R. Franklin, Hon. F. L. Rynum, Mr. John Scott, and Mr. O. M. Jamieson. The trip to New Orleans was very pleasant.

The scenery along the route was very beautiful. The route was via Atlanta, West Point, Montgomery, and Mobile. The Louisville and Nashville, which carried the train from Montgomery,

New Orleans is an intensely Southern city, and the treatment of the soldiers was almost akin to worship.

It was a great Reunion. A great joy filled the hearts of the old soldiers as they passed in solemn beauty and silence the hands of comrades unseen since war had bowed and hearts full of sorrow they parted nearly forty years ago.

There were addresses, including the one by the late General Gordon, which were of a high order. The general sentiment was that the South should be restored to its former position.

It is interesting upon the Reunion were Mrs. Rosewell Jackson, Mrs. L. E. King, Mrs. M. B. Bragg, Mrs. Thomas J. Semmes, Miss Lucy Lee Hill, daughter of A. P. Hill, and Miss Julia Jackson, Christian, grand-daughter of General Rosewell Jackson.

Judge John Reagan, the sole surviving member of President Davis' cabinet, was present, and made a short address during one of the sessions of the convention.
