Brantlee Price Is "Miss Glamor"

Hawaii-born Brantlee Price, Newberry College sophomore and a perennial beauty title winner, has been named "Miss Glamor 1969" by editors of the student newspaper, "The Indian."

Miss Price, whose home is in Newberry, also holds the "Miss Newberry" title and will compete in the Miss South Carolina pageant at Greenville in July.

Last year she was the South Carolina Apple Queen, and also reigned over the state's Horse and Buggy Festival. She was a high school homecoming queen, and as a college freshman she was chosen "Miss Newberrian" in the annual pageant sponsored by the college's yearbook.

Her "Miss Glamor" selection places her in a national college and university competition sponsored by Glamor magazine.

The tall, brown-eyed beauty has a cosmopolitan background. Her parents, Col. and Mrs. J. R. Price, were in Hawaii on army duty when Brantlee was born. She also has lived in Japan, and in several regions of the U. S.

Probably died from poisoned moonshine

Preliminary medical reports indicate that a 45-year-old Newberry County man died Thursday at a local hospital of lead poisoning after drinking moonshine liquor. Sheriff B. Eugene Shealy said Monday.

Sheriff Shealy said the illegal whisky has been sent to Atlanta, Ga., for laboratory tests to determine if it contained lead salts which might have caused the death of Willie Price, Negro, of Rt. 1.

Price died at the county hospital at 8:15 a.m. Thursday. Physicians examining the victim said preliminary medical reports indicated death was due to lead poisoning.

Shealy said his deputies arrested six persons and confiscated over 68 gallons of illegal liquor while attempting to track down the person who sold the whisky to the victim.

Charged with possession and storing of illegal whisky and
