ORANGEBURG, S. C. JULY 30, 1874.

Mr. Kirk Robinson is authorized to collect and receipt for advertisements and subscriptions to the Times.

TOWN DIRECTORY.

Mayor—John W. Mosely.
Clerk and Treas.—Kirk Robinson.
Aldermen—Henry Washington, J. P. Harley, B. Williamson, T. D. Wolfe.

Echard only remains ten days with his Photograph Canopy.

The meeting at Lewisville on Saturday last was a fizzle, the few that were there, knotted off in squads and gave the reformers a cold shoulder.

A juvenile knight of the bat and half carries a black and blue eye as a token of affection. Cannot our town Marshal put a stop to the nuisance of base ball playing on the street.

Echard makes two victoria pictures for $1 00

The bricks for the new depot have been brought down; and splendid brick they are. We are now convinced that the railroad Company is in earnest. It has been a hard struggle to give up that old nondescript affair, but its days are numbered, and the agent is happy.

Echard the photographer, in his commodious tent is doing a lively business. A true picture for a mere song; Give him a call and wait your turn. He takes four pictures for one dollar, one for mother, and one for father, one for brother and one for— Echard deserves a full support, and will get it.

CORRESPONDENTS must affix their names to their communications to insure attention. If a writer is ashamed of his name or unwilling for other reasons to give it, they will save trouble by not sending letters to this office. Of course the name is not published unless desired, all that we want is to know who the party is.

Orders taken for out door views of residences &c., by Echard.

The Charleston Daily Sun is upon file, and its light promises to shine in some of the dark haunts of State government. Located at the commercial centre of the State, where monied influence affects the legislative expression the Sun has a field for good service. Its editor has a bold opportunity, and we hope will meet his promises. Let the "Sun" be upon one flank and the "News and Courier" on the other, the fur will fly from the catamounts.

BEFORE us is a protest of a draft for $50, on Hon F. J. Moses Jr., endorsed by C. S. Bull to DeMars & Wolfe, and sent for collection through Messrs. Fowles and Robinson. The Notarial return states that the office of F. J. Moses is closed &c. This draft was received by Messrs. DeMars & Wolfe in payment of a bill due them, and they may have the privilege of holding it as a souvenir of the splendid representative of the party who put so low and despised a creature where he is.

Special attention is given to family groups by Echard.

It is our lamentable duty to announce the death of the Rev. I. S. Keith Legate at his home on Wednesday the 29th. This announcement carries sadness with it far and wide. Mr Legate came to Orangeburg in May 1835, to establish the Presbyterian church. By his efforts and that of his family the first church was built; over which he presided as pastor for ten years, relinquishing the post only on account of declining health. Since then his labors have been broadly philanthropic. "Truly a good man hath fallen."

The small boys of our town under the name of "the Junior nine" played a match game with the "Arragansetts" at Branchville on Saturday evening. A number of people witnessed the game, which was lively and interesting, and the playing on both sides was very good. Mr. J. W. Fahey of Branchville acted umpire. The game occupied about two hours and half, and the score stood twenty-nine to forty-eight, in favor of the "Juniors." After partaking of a splendid supper prepared for them by their opponents the "Juniors" returned well pleased with their trip. Look out Carolinas.

All work done at Savannah and Charleston prices by Echard.

The communication of to day addressed to the "Taxpayers" is a full and complete statement of the objects sought by the association. Any doubts respecting the "Taxpayers Association" must be removed, co-operation must be secured, and success must be attained, or our people are a mob, unwieldy, unsettled, and routed. Let the masses vote as they will; elect whom they please; be as blind to reason as a muzzin; only let them join to bring law to bear on rascally officials, and we will rout them on their own ground. Let us keep aloof, and our homes will go under the hammer of the tax gatherer.

It is related of Mr. Pettigrew that when a young man and practising in Colleton he rode up to an old lady's house for a dinner. Being welcomed, he waited the meal. It came on; the leading dish being a burly roasted rooster. Mr. P. tried his knife and fork, but the frame work of the ancient relic of the barnyard refused dissection. In dismay and discomfort he pushed the silver spoons into the dressing of the fowl and hiding all securely, went his way. Returning two days after he saw for dinner the venerable chancier of the previous meal, and accused his hostess to that effect. "No sir," she replied but strange to say my silver spoons were lost the day you were here." "Ah," replied Mr. P. "well madame if by any means possible, contrivable or attainable you'll show me how to get into the interior of this biped (pointing to the rooster) I'll discover your lost treasure," and forthwith commenced to pull out the spoons. Like the "reformers" they've been tried before and are too tough, bring out a new dish.

Mass Meeting—Grand Speeches—Row and Pistols.

On Monday last a crowd of between seventy-five and a hundred of the constituency assembled on the public square, to hear words of counsel from the reformers. While the thunders of eloquence "rolled along the trembling earth and fastened on" the elm trees, there was an outside influence sapping the foundations of the reform temple. A squad of cheap constituency saw their man over a watermelon; another batch sidled off under orders to a grog shop, and pledged faithfulness in a bumper of Pike's rectified. There were about as many candidates in the field as there were voters, and "when all were so true who could be refused." Ransier (colored) premised his remarks by saying that abuses did exist, but who were to blame, first the conservatives then the bad men of the republican party. Ransier however is a reformer; his speech was cautious and noncommittal. Fumbert (colored ex-trader) had a word or two to offer, as he is a reformer. Phillips (white) thought the colored people had been bought, and hoodwinked too long, he advised them to take the dollars, bacon and whiskey, and the ticket that was put in their hand to vote, to be sure that their pantaloons' pockets, had holes in them, large enough to let the ticket out, and keep the money in, and then vote as honest men; Good advice Phillips is a reformer too he says. Other speakers clambered to the rostrum, an occasional yell testified to some hit, or lash of patriotic outburst. Mr. A. B. Knowlton then took the stand, and for reasons not known to us has been in bad odor for some time with certain leading politicians, he was not acceptable. During his remarks one Charles Green (colored and a penitentiary bird) interrupted Mr. K, whereupon the speaker informed the crowd of Green's accomplishments. Green made a rush with a pistol, and a lively scamper ensued, small boys took to trees, and a general amount of rowdyism, in the shape of oaths and abusive language followed. J. Felder Meyers (editor of the Orangeburg News) was accused of being an accomplice with Green in the matter. As also J. H. Walkers (a young white man) and candidate for legislative honors, but they denied having any knowledge of the pistols. After a while the crowd gathered around the stand and Paul Jones (colored) went into the political cauldron. The "reform party" are represented by the old wire pullers, and their game is familiar to many of the colored people who look on with contempt particularly after the disgraceful rowdyism of Monday.
