At 11:05 Recorder Goff, escorted by Judges Cowing, Fitzgerald and Martine, entered the room while the room rang with applause. He was calm and dignified, and looked every inch the judge. In a very few words Judge Cowing introduced the recorder, expressing his deep appreciation of his character and pledging him support in all his work. Mr. Goff then replied in a graceful manner expressing a gratefulness for the courteous treatment he had been accorded. His first appointment was that of Lawrence F. Dowling as warden of the grand jury. Dowling was a classmate of Recorder Goff twenty years ago in Cooper Union, and has been active in the reform movement. He is 42 years old. In pointed terms the communication gave Dr. Parkhurst advice in his campaign of purifying the city, and boldly stated that he had not always pursued the right methods. The distribution of the printed leaflet apparently did not disturb Dr. Parkhurst. He made no reference to the matter.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE CONVENES.

The Fusionists Control on Joint Ballot With a Division of Honors Between the Republicans and Populists. Other General News.

RALEIGH, N. C., January 7.—The North Carolina legislature convenes on Wednesday with a populist-republican fusion majority on joint ballot. Zeb Vance Walser, of Lexington, one of the younger of the republican leaders in the northwestern section of the state, will be speaker of the lower branch.

Marion Butler. This session of the legislature is especially noteworthy in the fact that both the members of the United States senate are to be elected; the short term to succeed Senator Jarvis, appointed upon the death of Senator Vance, and the long term to succeed Senator Ransom, whose term of office expires on the fourth of March. Democrats having lost control of the assembly, the long term, in consequence of an arrangement made prior to the state election, will go to Marion Butler, the leader of the North Carolina populists, and the strongest champion of the fusion movement. The fight for the short term is between Jettie Pritchard, a young republican, of the western part of the state, and a number of other prominent men in the councils of that party. The chances are in favor of the former, as he has been the nominee of the republican minority on other occasions. A bitter fight will be made, however, with possibly disastrous results to the straight republican organization in this state.

Marion Butler is quite likely to be a conspicuous figure in the United States senate as well as one of the youngest members of that body. He was born in Sampson county, North Carolina, in 1863, received a good education and then accepted the principalship of the village academy where he was educated. When a headless boy Mr. Butler became interested in the Alliance movement, and has made it stronger in Sampson and adjoining counties than in any other part of the state. In 1890 Mr. Butler was elected to the state senate. At the late election the populist, through fusion with the republicans were very successful.
