

THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS was pleased to meet a number of the good people of Hartsville last Saturday. While there he saw some beautiful grounds and residences and was pleased to meet a few of Chesterfield's citizens who have settled there during the last few years. Mr. J. S. White, successor to J. F. Hunley & Co., is now one of Hartsville's leading citizens. Mr. White was a friend to the writer long before he moved from Chesterfield to Hartsville and the writer is glad to know that he is doing so well in Hartsville. J. L. Coker & Co's. establishment is a very large one and the concern does a large business with the farmers in the country around.

The Welsh Neck School is a fine institution and would be a great credit to towns much larger than Hartsville.

While the writer did not have an opportunity of going about much while in town, he nevertheless saw enough to convince him that Hartsville is a fine town and contains many pleasant and well-to-do people and that one visit is sufficient only to make him visit it again.

I am glad to say there is but very little sickness in this locality at present.

The crops in this vicinity have been seriously injured by the heavy rain-fall.

Our tobacco farmers have begun curing the weed, and are looking forward to the time when they may handle the dollars and cents as their reward.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Dampier, of Columbia, will leave for their home on Wednesday next, after spending some time with relatives and friends in this neighborhood.

THE MASONIC FEAST AT HARTSVILLE.

The Masons of Hartsville and their friends enjoyed a banquet picnic last Saturday. Mr. Geo. W. Brown, who was invited to address them, made a short and interesting address which was much appreciated. Mr. Brown also repeated some masonic poetry which was interesting to those outside of the order as well as to the Masons themselves. Maj. J. L. Coker, in a few well chosen and appropriate remarks, welcomed the visiting masons and others to Hartsville.

After the ceremonies at the hall, a nice dinner was spread under the trees in the midst of the town and all seemed to enjoy the festivities of the occasion. The people in and around Hartsville are most hospitable and the stranger who visits the town one is sure to come again.

The Hartsville Paper Mill.

Last Saturday Maj. J. L. Coker kindly took Mr. Brown and the Editor of THE NEWS on a tour of inspection over his fine paper mill. The mill is certainly a big enterprise and it must have taken a plenty of nerve and money to get such an undertaking in good running order. Preparations are now being made to dam Black Creek for the purpose of getting sufficient water to power the mill. Everything at the mill is now in good running order and the wrapping paper, which they manufacture, is shipped to all parts of the country, as the traveling man sends in the orders. Such an enterprise is not only a credit to Hartsville, but is a credit to Darlington county as well.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA COLLEGE.

An advertisement of the South Carolina College appears in another column. 185 students, including thirteen young women, were enrolled last session, and thirty-one counties of South Carolina were represented. The old college has just completed a most successful year and the faculty and alumni are earnestly desirous that the 30th of September next shall mark the beginning of a more than ever prosperous session. The total necessary expenses are so small at the South Carolina College, that many a young man is able to avail himself of the fine opportunities there offered at little more than it would cost him to board at home and attend the town graded school.

Death of Dr. Daniels.

Dr. L. P. Daniels, colored, who has been practicing medicine in Darlington for about two years, died Tuesday morning of fever and other complications. Dr. Daniels was a native of Barnwell county and a man of intelligence, who was respected in the community by both white and colored people. He had built up a large practice in Darlington and his death is a loss to the community. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss. The remains was taken to Barnwell Tuesday.

Corn Abundant and Fine.

In going from Darlington to Hartsville last Saturday with Mr. Geo. W. Brown, THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS saw more corn and the finest corn it has ever seen his pleasure to see. Even if cotton is low this season, the farmers of Darlington county will have an abundance of hog and henny. A number of nice rice patches were also seen by the roadside and altogether the prospect of a good year for the farmers seemed encouraging indeed.

Each one of the fair daughters of Sumter was a belle, and on all sides there were kind words of praise for the success of the opera which had had so much to do with the success of the town. The people of Darlington and ways to have the people of Sumter to their guests and they will receive a cordial welcome when they come to the opera.
