

Jefferson Davis at Home.

The first portion of the pavilion is occupied by Mr. Davis in library and study. Here I found him, slightly indisposed and lying upon a lounge. His manner is genial and very kindly, with that charming courtesy characteristic of the high-bred Southern gentleman.

Seventy years of age, Mr. Davis has yet a fresh and vigorous look. His hair, moustache and whiskers are white in part, but his eye is bright and cheerful. His face in repose is almost severely intellectual, but the smile which lights up his mouth, and his quiet, cheerful laugh dispel the first impression of coldness. Few of our public men have the quiet fascination of manner, the old-fashioned grace, and the charming conversational powers. His memory is capacious and retentive. One might, with a facile phonographic pen, collect great stores of reminiscence from his lips.—Boston Herald.

Miscegeation in the North.

The enforcement of the laws against miscegenation, both in Virginia and Indiana, has caused much hostile comment in the Radical press of the country. They overlook the fact that their own strongholds of Maine, Michigan and Vermont have just such laws, and no efforts have been made to remove them from the statute books. The Michigan law says simply that "no white person shall intermarry with a negro," while the Maine statute is even more sweeping, providing that "no white person shall intermarry with a negro, Indian or mulatto!"—Mobile Register.

A feud had existed over a year between W. G. McCutcheon and Jack Rodgers, two young white men of Sumter. On last Saturday Rodgers sent word to McCutcheon that he was coming to the Base Ball Club of which he was a member and kill or whip him. A fight took place at the time mentioned in which McCutcheon was shot and killed by Rodgers with a pistol, McCutcheon being unarmed.

A writer in the "Weekly Tribune" says that he hunted last year cabbage worms till he nearly crippled his back. One day a neighbor's wife came in and told him to use a tea made of cayenne pepper, to sprinkle the cabbages with it twice a day. He applied it, and his cabbage and back were saved. He watched the mites, and they wouldn't get light on the plants which had the pepper on them.

In answer to a question as to the effect of the Blaine war cry of the Bloody shirt and Confederate Brigadiers in Congress upon the Ohio campaign, Gen. Ewing says that on the military question, Gen. Rice and himself with three legs can beat Foster and Hickenlooper with four.

Sunflowers are said to be a protection against malaria.

The saddest words of tongue or pen "I intend to pay; I can't say when."
