Democratic Differences.

Representatives of the Party Harmonizing in New York.

For the past few days there have been arriving in this city, from different parts of the State, representative Democrats who were summoned to take part in a conference to-day, at the headquarters of the Democratic State Committee in St. James Hotel. Different elements in the party are represented by visiting politicians, and it is expected that the conference to-day will be productive of harmonizing results. The visitors will be met by local Democratic leaders, and a mutual exchange of views will take place. Prominent Democrats from all parts of the State were invited and this morning the rooms of the State Committee were thronged to their utmost capacity. All of the State Committee will be represented either personally or by proxy. A plan was adopted dividing the State into nine districts, which are to be visited by a committee of six members.

Cheering from New York.

A correspondent from New York city represents Tammany and Kellyism as visibly on the wane during the last week. The leaders are weakening very much. They live by politics and, as is always the case with such men, they are looking after their bread and butter. They are beginning to understand the situation and realize that the death knell of Tammany is certain if they persist in their opposition, and with it goes their occupation, which is office-seeking. The defection in their camp is represented as increasing. From this aspect of affairs we think the Democracy can count on New York again as of yore in spite of the gigantic bolt, especially when we consider the fact that the opposition or Tammany has greatly strengthened the Republican party in the rural districts with the liberal and right-thinking men of the State.

The State University.

The Board of Trustees of the State University assembled in Columbia last week, the Presidents of the various Colleges of the State having been invited to assemble with them.

The subject for consideration was the report of the special Committee on the organization of the Agricultural and Mechanical school in the University. The plan was favorably considered and regarded as feasible, and highly important, and it is believed will soon be consummated.

For the Orangeburg Times, Sunday School Celebration at Congaree.

Mr. Editor:

If there is one religious gathering to be preferred to another, it is the assembling of a Sunday school for a celebration or picnic; for what can be more pleasant than to see all the children of a neighborhood gathered together with their parents and friends for the encouragement of such a cause as a Sunday school?

On the fourth Saturday in Sept. it was our pleasure to attend one of the pleasantest Sunday school picnics we ever attended. At about 11 o'clock the children commenced gathering in from all directions. The table had been previously arranged by the worthy Superintendent, Mr. F. W. Herlong. At about 12 o'clock prayer was offered in behalf of the Sunday school, Superintendent and teachers, after which followed a review, the scholars acquitting themselves admirably. Then followed an address by Rev. D. F. Spigner, which contained humor with instruction to excel anything I had ever heard in the way of a Sunday school address. After the address the Superintendent requested all to vacate the house for a few minutes. The scholars were then called in one at a time and each agreeably surprised by a bundle of candy; then they passed on out at the other door, so the surprise was to all. Each teacher then took charge of his class, formed them in two ranks and stood till dinner was announced, then all marched gallantly to the table where a dinner was spread that showed that the ladies around Congaree know just how to cook and prepare a picnic to please the children, and some that are not children too, for it seemed that all present enjoyed the dinner as much as they did the address. When all had done full justice to the inner man, there was taken up of the fragments several baskets and boxes full. Then followed speeches by some of the scholars, and short, and appropriate addresses by the Superintendent, which showed that his whole soul was with the Sunday school. All praise and honor is due Mr. Herlong for the efficient manner in which he has managed the Sunday school, he being the only Superintendent that has ever carried a Sunday school successfully through a summer at Congaree Church since it has been a Church. He is a young man who makes no great display of religious ideas, but it seems that his nature is especially adapted to the instruction of children, and when the Church selected him for Superintendent, it was a step in the right direction, and the right man was put in the right place.

CONGAREE.

[For the Orangeburg Times, Our Homesteads.

Let us Beautify Them.

Mr. Editor: Permit me to call the attention of some of the many readers of your valuable paper to the importance of making their homes more attractive, more pleasant. The beauties seen around the habitation of man, exhibit in the main, the reflex of a happy spirit and a cultivated intellect. Such is the condition of many of the rural seats of Orangeburg County. Your kind attention therefore will be claimed whilst we present some of the prominent features of the following names: Oakland, Ashland, Glebeland and Cedarland. The first will be readily recognized by the number of beautiful oaks that encircle the dwelling and farm lot.

These chroniclers of time-progress are carrying out the grand design of the husbandman, not only in beautifying his place, but of adding something far better than beauty and shade, the stimulus to study the works of nature and from its silent and yet instructive lessons, to rise higher and yet higher in the scale of human intellect until, like the representative of Bashan, they shall stand as pillars and finger-boards to the passer-by, by which he may profit if he will. The next may be styled the seat of pleasure. Benevolence being written upon every thing that imparts notoriety to the site; it may not be out of place to suppose, that, in the study of nature and of art, in all their varied relations, the mind will become more or less imbued with the spirit they inculcate; and therefore it has become the seat of pleasant associations not only to the family circle but also to the friend and stranger. This devoted spot surrounded with so many beauties has its counter-part only in the intelligence and refinement of its happy inmates.

Glebeland also stands forth in the bright category. Offering a 'Cart-blanche' to the pencil. The diagram of the site and farm gives a distinct view of its extent, modus of culture, and promise. The habitation is encircled by beautiful shrubbery, culled from the bright nursery of nature. In front of the dwelling may be seen, a parterre skillfully laid out. The emblems of appreciation constancy, must have been traced by a delicate hand, the two large hearts fronting each other, separated by a walk representing "the vale which the sweet waters meet." The two rotundas or mounds with many other designs equally significant fill the area. In an this we see both taste and refinement illustrated. May the living pictures within ever be mirrored in the beauties without.

Cedarland—This lovely spot is clothed with the badge of perpetuity. Its claims upon the happy family are echoed back with notes of sweetest accord. May its perennial caste ever encircle the habitation, rendered sacred by many pleasant associations; and may it always be a verdant oasis, where the pure in heart may dwell and place upon its record some bright monument to its praise.

THETA.

How He Convinced Them.

Ex-Governor J. W. Throckmorton certainly understands all the arts of an old Texan. In his speech defending Ed. Bomar, at Gainesville, after having spoken about an hour he said:

"Gentlemen of the jury—It is said by the prosecution that because the deceased was in his shirt sleeves when killed, he had no pistol."

Here Mr. Throckmorton pulled off his coat and stood before the jury in his shirt sleeves.

"Would you say," continued Mr. Throckmorton, "that I am not armed because I am in my shirt sleeves. Look! do you see my arms?" cried he, holding up his hands.

No signs of arms could be seen.

Mr. Throckmorton then drew a pistol from under his left arm, another from under his right, one from each boot, and a huge bowie knife from the back of his neck, placing them upon the table.

"You see, gentlemen, though in my shirt sleeves, I could be well armed." This was a clincher, and it carried the point, entirely destroying the argument of the prosecution.—Dallas Herald.

He Calls Them "Gentlemen."

Grant's speech to the gathering of Ex-Federal and Ex-Confederate soldiers at Oakland, Cal., was not sufficiently stalwart to suit Z. Chandler or Blaine or Sherman. Gen. Sherman refused to give his countenance to a fraternization of Union and Confederate soldiers, and even Hayes appears to think that the war is still going on. Grant, however, went so far as to say:

Gentlemen of the two Armies and Navies: I am very proud of the welcome you have given me to-day. I am particularly happy to see the good will and cordiality existing between the soldiers of the two armies, and I have an abiding faith that this good feeling will always exist. Thus united we have nothing to fear from any nation in the world."

He actually calls the ex rebels gentlemen, and is proud of the welcome which they in part gave him. If Grant were an expert in gentlemen, his opinion might be more valuable. Still this concession will be a source of sadness to Z. Chandler and Deacon McKee.—Baltimore Gazette.

Good Will Between the People of the State.

We deem it essential to say a word or so to the people of South Carolina upon the above subject. God knows we do so in no spirit of dictation, but simply as a citizen having nothing to ask and nothing to seek but peace and good will between all classes and sections of our fellow-citizens and of the State we own and cherish as a common mother. We fear our un-office-seeking people are losing sight of the common good in the personal partisanship we are indulging in some localities. To shout for this or that man is catching, and depraving as well. We may in the end lose sight of South Carolina and our own supreme welfare in the angry personal broils into which we may fall. We are the best of us but human, and when the feeling of opposition is fully aroused we may wreck a world in betting on a fly. "Verbum sat."—Columbia Register.
