[TO BE CONTINUED.] A Lady's Reason for Not Blancing.

Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

Dancing would lead me into very close contact with very pernicious company; and evil communications corrupt good manners.

Dancing would require me to use and permit freedoms with the other sex, of which I should be heartily ashamed, and which I believe to be

My parents and friends would be anxious about me if I were out late, keeping company with they know not whom.

Ministers and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not safe to set myself against them. If a thing be ever doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side.

Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure and lovely and of good report.

Dancing is generally accompanied with drinking, and I see drinking produces a great deal of evil.

I am told that dancing is a great temptation and snare to young men, and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer, and I mean to do rothing that will estrange me from my God and Saviour.

There are p'enty of graceful exercises and cheerful amusements which have none of the objections connected with them that lie against dancing.

Life is very critical. Any word may be our last. Any farewell, even among glee and merriment, may be forever. If this truth were but burn ed into our consciousness, and it ruled as a deep conviction and power in ner. Address our lives, would it not give a new meaning to all our human relationship? Would it not make us far more tender than we sometimes are? Would it not oftentimes put a rein upon our rash and impetuous speech? Would we carry in our hearts the miserable suspicions and jeulousies that now so often embitter the fountain of our loves? Would we be so impatient of the faults of others? Would we allow trivial misunderstandings to build up strong walls between us and those who ought to stand very close to us? Would we keep alive petty quarrels, year after year, which a manly word any day would compose? Would we pass neighbors or old friends on the street without recognition, because of some real or fancied slight, some wounding of pride, or some uncient gradge? Or would we be so chary of our kind words, our commendations, our sympathy, our comfort, when weary hearts all about us are breaking for just such expressions of interest or appreciation as we have it in our power to give?

Hou. Jefferson Davis decline I to deliver the lecture before the literary Society of Newberry, on account of pressing engagements. Upon the reception of the letter of Mr. Davis declining, Gov. Simpson wrote to him again, expressing the carnest desire of South Carolinians to do honor to the Chieftain of the "Lost Cause," who was made to suffer so much in their behalf, and for their action. In response to this, Mr. Davis acknowledges his appreciation for the kind feeling tendered him, but still refuses to accept the invitation on the same grounds given in his first reply, say. ing that it would afford him unbound ed pleasure to meet again with those who had honored him in the past, and whose regard he highly valued, but compliance was impossible, many other invitations of a simuliar nature having already been declined by him.

> "Why do girls elope?" is the very interesting query put by a contemporary. Well, there are various reasons, the principal ones being that the girls are displeased with the way their mothers do housework, and some girls have an idea that they can support husbands. And a good many of them have to do it too.
