General Matters.

JOHNSTOWN, S. C., August 1st, 1881, Editor Orangeburg Times:

Allow me to call your attention to a little typographical error in my last concerning our Sabbath School Union at Johnstown Academy. Instead of Miss Sallie Corbitt, it should read Miss Pauline Corbitt.

At our last meeting Miss Corbitt recited 1,765 verses, and Miss Callie Gunter 1,765, thus carrying off the first and second prizes. Such bright young ladies, with such retentive memories are seldom to be found.

Prof. O'Brien's school continues to grow in numbers.

The late remarkably dry spell has greatly injured our crops, but just lately we are having some refreshing showers.

We hope to meet many of your good people at our large Sabbath School Convention which opens at Dean Swamp Church on the 3rd Friday, to continue three days.

Protracted meetings are in order for the next three weeks in this vicinity, and we hope much good will be done.

Our people exult over the downfall of Conkling, and reverently pray for the recovery of President Garfield.

How Little Princesses Dress.

In London, July 15th, the three little daughters of the Prince and Princess of Wales came near being killed by runaway horses. If there were nothing else worthy the admiration of observers in the conduct of the heirs to the British throne (in point of fact there is a very great deal to be admired) their manner of rearing their children would awaken approbation from every parent. The boys are sent off on a cruise around the globe, and it is understood that no favors are shown them above other lads of equal naval rank on ship-board, whatever festivities are created in their honor at the different ports where they land. As to the little girls, if I were asked to name those who, being the children of a lady, are uniformly most plainly dressed and who conduct themselves most modestly, of all such in England, I should say at once "the little Princesses of Wales." I have seen them at the opera, with their parents, when, on one occasion, the little one getting sleepy, her mother took her up on her lap and let her sleep there on her knees all the evening. I have seen them at charitable ceremonies which were attended by much pomp and circumstance. I have seen them riding, driving, walking, boating, and on none of these occasions, I venture to say, did the wearing apparel of each one of the little girls exceed in cost a ten-dollar bill. A simple white muslin frock, undecorated by any lace, unrelieved by any silk slip or expensive sash, formed the opera costume; the winter and boating dresses are of serge, the summer dresses of washing prints. And all are made in the simplest style—no gofferings, puckerings, flouncings; no bias bands, no knife-platings. No feathers in the hat; no furbelows any where. Would that the "Mrs. Lotfies" of America, those vulgar and tasteless creatures who at the present time at the watering places all over the country are making the bodies of their children a mere means of parading their power to spend money, and who are ruining the moral health of their offspring by inculcating in these impressionable young breasts a mad passion for personal adornment—would that these silly and reprehensible mothers, I say, could be here to see the pattern set in this matter by the Princess of Wales. The example is followed, as all examples are when coming from the fountain head of social eminence, and the result is seen in the admirable dressing of young English people, universally extolled in every community of taste. Every one rejoices to hear that the little Princesses came to no harm yesterday in the runaway. Their carriage was badly shattered, and a new wheel had to be fitted to it in the open street before it could be rolled on to the coach-house. The little girls, with their governess, were safely lifted out, and accompanied by a gentleman of standing at court, who happened to be passing, they made their way on foot to Marlborough House.

There is no use in drugging yourself to death, and buying all the vile medicines for internal use when you can be cured of fever and ague, dumb ague, bilious disorders, jaundice, dyspepsia, as well as all disorders and ailments of the liver, blood and stomach, by wearing one of Prof. Guilmotte's French liver pads, which is a sure cure every time. If your druggist does not keep the pad, send $1.50 in a letter to French Pad Co. Toledo, O., and it will be sent you by return mail. It is the only pad that is guaranteed to cure. Beware of counterfeits. may 19

A Cure for Scandal—A Terrible Example of the Mouth.

POVERTY, August 10th 1881. Editor Orangeburg Times:

I saw in your issue of two or three weeks ago a receipt for making scandal, and the people around here were bad enough before, but it only made them worse, so I thought that I would try and see if I could give a cure for scandal, so please publish, for the benefit of the above named Hill.

Take of "Good nature" one ounce; of an herb called by the Indians, "Mind your own business," one ounce; mix this with a little "charity for others," and two or three sprigs of "keep your tongue between your teeth," simmer them together in a vessel called "circumspection," for a short time, and it will be fit for use. Application—the symptoms are a violent itching in the tongue and the roof of the mouth, which invariably takes place when you are in company with a species of animals called gossips. When you feel a fit of the disorder coming on, take a teaspoonful of the mixture; hold it in your mouth, which you will keep closely shut till you get home, and you will find a complete cure. Should you apprehend a relapse, keep a small bottle full about you, and on the slightest symptom repeat the dose.

"Darn It."

They had a terrible time at a wedding up at Petaluma the other day, and which only goes to show how the smallest drawback will take the stiffness out of the swellest occasion.

It seems that the ceremony was a very grand affair indeed. There were eight bridesmaids, and the church was crowded from pit to dome as the dramatic critics would say. But when they got to the proper place in the ceremony, and the groom began feeling unwell for the ring, discovered that he wasn't on hand. After the minister scowled at the miserable wretch for a while, the latter detected the magic circle had slipped through a hole in his pocket and worked into his boot. He communicated the terrible fact in a whisper to the bride, who turned deathly pale, and was only kept from fainting by the reflection that they would inevitably cut the strings of her satin corset in case she did.

"Why don't you produce the ring?" whispered the bride's big brother, hoarsely, and feeling for his pistol, under the impression that the miserable man was about to back out.

"I can't, it's in my boot," explained the groom under his breath, his very hair meanwhile turning red with mortification.

"Try and fish it out, somehow—hurry up!" murmured the preacher, behind his book.

"I'll try," gasped the victim, who was very stout; and he put one foot on the chancel rail, pulled up his trousers leg and began making spasmodic jabs for the ring with his forefinger. The minister motioned to the organist to squeeze out a few notes to fill in the time, while a rumor went rapidly through the congregation to the effect that a telegram had just arrived proving the groom had four other wives living in the East already.

"I can't reach it!" groaned the half-married man, in agony. "It won't come."

"Sit down and take your boot off, you fool!" hissed the bride's mother, while the bride herself moaned piteously and wrung her hands.

There was nothing left; so the sufferer sat down on the floor and began to wrestle with his boot, which was naturally new and tight, while a fresh rumor got under way that the groom was heavily tight.

As the boot came finally off, its crushed wearer endeavored, unsuccessfully, to hide a "wide dollar" hole in the heel of his stocking; noticing which the parson who was a humorous sort of sky-contractor, said grimly:

"You seem to be getting married just in time, my young friend."

The ceremony proceeded with the party of the first part standing on a leg, trying to hide his well-ventilated foot under the tail of his coat, and appropriately muttering, "Darn it!" at short intervals.—San Francisco Post.

CONUNDRUM.

What is the difference between a man going to Plymouth Church and a lover about to propose? asks the Boston Courier. Don't know.—Boston Post. Then you had better go back to school. One is going to see Beecher and the other, to beseech her.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Good Advice.

The following extract is taken from the address of President Miles before the young ladies of Yorkville Female College:

"While we are warned against a Pharisaical parade of our observance of religious duties, yet are we bid to 'let our light'—the radiance of the Christian's life—'so shine before men that they may see our good works.'"

And I hope I am not trenching on theological ground, in my lay sermon, if I would inculcate that broad and catholic spirit of religious faith which would include in one great Christian family all the true children and followers of Christ. Might we not paraphrase the familiar dictum of Pope and say—

"For forms of faith let bigots then contest; That which best rules the heart and life is best."

Let me once more, in conclusion, commend to your attention during all your training and preparation for the duties of life, that description of a woman "nobly planned" which I have already quoted from one of the greatest, as he is one of the purest and most thoughtful of English poets. It has really been the text which I have endeavored to expound and expand in my enforcement of the importance of not neglecting the cultivation of the strictly domestic arts and accomplishments, and laying the greatest stress upon the "education of the heart," in the ways of true religion.

While scrupulously striving then to develop to their fullest extent your God-given intellectual faculties, and to store up in your minds the accumulated knowledge of the generations of man, let me beg each one of you also to remember, that a woman "nobly planned," fit to be a true "help meet" to man and trainer of children for the Kingdom of Heaven, ought to be

"A creature not too bright or good For human nature's daily food; And yet a spirit still, and bright With something of an angel light."

When Men Are at Their Best.

Dr. Beard states that from an analysis of the lives of a thousand representative men in all the great branches of the human family he made the discovery that the golden decade was between forty and fifty; the brazen between twenty and thirty; the iron between fifty and sixty. The superiority of youth and middle life over old age in original work appears all the greater when we consider the fact that all the positions of honor and prestige—professorships and public stations—are in the hands of the old. Reputation, like money and position, is mainly confined to the old. Men are not widely known until long after they have done the work that gave them their fame. Portraits of great men are delusions; statues are false! They are taken when men have become famous, which, on the average, is at least twenty-five years after they did the work which gave them their fame. Original work requires enthusiasm. If all the work done by men under forty-five was annihilated, they would be reduced to barbarism. Men are at their best at that time when enthusiasm and experience are almost evenly balanced. This period, on the average, is from thirty-eight to forty. After this the law is that experience increases, but enthusiasm decreases. Of course there are exceptions.—Christian Intelligencer.

Agricultural Education.

Professor Scott, who has recently been appointed to the chair of Agriculture at Cirencester College, England, remarked at the opening of the session that it was a sad blot on the intelligence of the age that probably ninety-nine per cent. of our farmers came into their profession in life without having ever received the slightest training, either scientific or technical, with special reference to their needs and requirements. The old Roman agriculturist, Columella, said something of the same sort more than eight hundred years ago, and still we have to complain of the neglect of the proper training of young men to enable them to become successful farmers. It is not quite so bad now as in the days of ancient Rome, but we have still far too many agriculturists who think more of watching the different phases of the moon than of studying the chemistry of the soil.

It is better to be the builder of our own name than to be indebted by descent for 'be proud gifts known to the books of heraldry.

Expensive Drugs.

A Milwaukee bald-headed man told a doctor that his hair was falling out, and asked him if he didn't know of something that would stop it. The doctor said he would fix him, so he wrote a prescription, which was as follows:

Chloride of sodium --- 1 oz. Aqua pura - - - - - 3 oz. Shake well and rub on the scalp every morning.

The bald man went to a druggist and had the prescription put up, paying $1.00 for it. He asked the druggist if it wasn't a little high, but felt ashamed when the druggist asked him if he knew how much aqua pura cost a gallon. He said he didn't, but supposed it came high. The druggist told him that aqua pura was one of the most penetrating drugs in the store, and as for chloride of sodium, there was nothing like it, and the war in Peru had sent it up kiting.

The bald man used the medicine, and felt as though it was doing him good. His wife noticed little new hairs coming out, and he felt good; so when the stuff was gone he took the bottle to the store and had it "filled" again. The chap who filled it this time was another chap, and when the bald-headed man threw down a dollar the druggist said: "O, never mind. We won't charge you anything for that." The bald man asked how that was, when the druggist said: "Why, it is only salt and water, anyway. The salt is only 2 cents a pound, and the water is pretty cheap this year." The bald man gave one gasp, and said: "Well by the great bald-headed Elijah, I paid $1 for filling that bottle before, and I want my money back. It is a baldheaded swindle. I thought that Peruvian story didn't look plausible." The druggist gave the man a box of cigars to keep still about it, but he won't speak to the other druggist who charged him a dollar.—Pala's Sun.

High salaries for public officials are advocated on the ground that they will place the official beyond temptation. This however does not follow. High salaries encourage extravagance, venality and dissipation. Habits grow with what they are fed on. The man who serves his country out of patriotism for a reasonable salary can always be trusted, while the man who only serves his country out of avarice for a high salary can never be trusted.—Ex.

A Galveston school teacher asked a new boy: "If a carpenter wants to cover a roof fifteen feet wide by thirty broad with shingles five feet broad by twelve long, how many shingles will he need?" The boy took up his hat and slid for the door. "Where are you going?" asked the teacher. "To find a carpenter. He ought to know that better than any of we fellows."—Galveston News.

Dr. J. G. Wannamaker has just received the finest stock of cigars, cigarettes, smoking and chewing tobaccos ever offered in Orangeburg. The Dr. never keeps anything but the best of goods in his line and we take pleasure in calling attention to these goods. Go down and try them.

The best way to apologize is to do such a kindness to the offended one that he will forget that you ever attempted to injure him.

Bad temper is its own scourge. Few things are bitterer than to feel bitter. A man's venom poisons himself more than his victim.
