FEMALE INDIAN SLAVES.

WOMEN OF ALL TRIBES DOOMED TO A HOPELESS BONDAGE.

Allowed Sometimes to Play Ball for Their Masters' Amusement-Affectionate Wives and Mothers.

The women of all Indian tribes doomed to a hopeless bondage of slavery, the fate of their sex in every savage race, have but few amusements, says a writer in the Kansas City Star. They accept their condition stoically, however, by the unerring law of heredity through ages of abuse and servile obedience. The lower the tribe in the scale of humanity the more degraded are the women. Among the Diggers of Oregon and Washington, with which savages I passed three or four years, the poor squaws are to be pitied. Living on roots and insects, which the women must furnish, their existence as a tribe may well be imagined to be a very precarious one. If the camas, a bulb growing deep in the ground and very sweet, should fail or the acorn and "black cricket" crop be not plentiful in any year, their winter is liable to be one of pinching poverty and starvation. I have often looked with profound pity upon troops of their old and young squaws under the hot summer sun wandering day after day over the prairies, the mothers with their little ones strapped to their backs, armed with a long fron, with which they dug the sometimes hard soil for the roots, which furnish a large portion of their support, haggard, broke down, but never complaining of their wearisome task.

Among many of the tribes, however, the women are allowed to have some amusement, but it is generally when their lords are half drunk. The Dakotahs frequently permitted their women to indulge in a game of ball which, however, differed entirely from that played by the men. When the men had worn themselves out with their games, and were in a maudlin state from too much whisky but wanted to have a little more fun, they would notify every one that the squaws were going to have a game of ball of their own. Then when the game began the bucks would roll over on the ground and laugh at the curious antics of their squaws in their arkward playing.

Frequently, when the men had been very lucky in their trapping or had been successful in making good trades with the whites, they would open their hearts and donate piles of gaudy goods, such as calicoes, ribbons and strings of beads, besides many other bright colored things known only to the Indian trade and found only in the stores of the traders. These things, which were to be the prizes contended for, would be put on a stick, which itself rested on two crotched poles upright in the ground and over which an old man kept guard. The old man was also umpire of the game. The women were then divided into two equal parties and the ball-or rather, two, for they play with two-fastened to the ends of a string eighteen or twenty inches long. Every squaw engaged in the game holds in each hand a small stick, on which she must try to catch the string to which is attached the two balls, and when she succeeds in doing this she throws them to and over the goal of the side she is playing. It is a remarkably comical sight to see the women roll over in the dust and dirt in the frantic efforts to catch the string on their sticks, while the men lie flat on the ground and roar with laughter at them.

Notwithstanding the women are kept so degraded there is as much affection among them for their husbands and children as I have ever witnessed among the Caucasian race. I will relate one

But with how much greater interest and with more depth of emotion we look upon our family plot in the cemetery. In the one case it is a matter of public in-terest, in the other it is a matter of public in-terest, in the other it is a matter of private and heartfelt affection. But around the grave at which we halt this morning there are gathered all kinds of stupendous in-terest. At this sepulcher, I have to tell you —in this sepulcher there was buried a king, a conqueror, an emancipator, a friend, a bother, a Christ. Monarch of the universe, but bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, and sorrow of our sorrow, and heart of our lew miles on the sea route, a group of hus few miles on the sea route, a group of hun-dreds of spirits coming down to the water to meat their bodies. It has for surroundings the manor in the It has for surroundings the manor in the suburbs of Jerusalem, a manor owned by a wealthy gentleman by the name of Joseph. He was one of the court of seventy who had condemned Christ, but I think he had voted in the negative, or, being a timid man, had been absent at the time of the casting of the vote. He had laid out the parterre at great expense. It was a hot climate, and I suppose there were broad branched trees and wind-ing paths underneath them, while here the waters rippled over the rock into a fishpool, and yonder the vines and the flowers clam-bered over the wall, and all around these were the beauties of klosk and arboriculture. sinew to sinew--until every joint is recon-structed and every arm finds its socket, and the amputated limb of the surgeon's table shall be set again at the point from which it was severed. After the fatigues of the Jerusalem court-room, how refreshing to come out in these suburbs botanical and pomological!

I walk a little further on in the parterre and I come across a cluster of rocks, and I see on them the marks of a sculptor's chisel. I come still closer and I find that there is a ubterranean recess and I walk down the marble stairs and come to a portico over the doorway—an architecture of fruits and flowers chisled by the hand of the sculptor. I go into the portico, and on either side there are rooms, two or four or six rooms of rock, in the walls niches, each niche large enough to hold a deat body. One of these enough to hold a dead body. One of these rooms of rock is especially wealthy with sculpture. It was a beautiful and charming spot. Why all this? The fact was that Jos-eph, the owner of the parterre, of that wealthy manor, had recognized the fact that be could not always walk those gardens, and he sought this as his own last resting place. Those who have visited the fine old ruin of Carlsbrooke Castle, in the Isle of Wight, will remember that there is a well there which still yields a good supply of fresh water, which is drawn up from a depth of 300 feet by a very curious method. We are all glad that in the short time of the Saviour's inhu-mation He lay amid flowers and sculpture. I cannot quite understand what I see in the newspapers where, amid the announcements and obsequies, the friends request "send no flowers." Why, there is no place so appro-priate for flowers as the casket of the de-parted. If your means allow-I repeat, if your means allow-let there be flowers on the casket, flowers on the hearse, flowers on the grave. Put them in the hand; it means victory. Christ was buried in a partarce. Ohio, broke open a general store and carried off thirty barrels of flour and several hun-dred pounds of meat. They said that they had to steal or starve. IN 1890 there were in Germany 1131 strikes victory. Christ was buried in a parterre. Christ was buried in a garden. Flowers are

Christ looks out from heaven at a burial where there are six in attendance, and re-members there are two more than He hav at His obsequies. Not recognizing this idea, how many small properties are scattered in how many small properties are scattered in the funeral ritas, and widowhood and or-phanage go out to the cold charity of the world. The departed leit enough property to have kept the family together until they could take care of themselves, but it is all absorbed in the funeral rites. That went for crape which ought to have gone for bread. A man of small means can hardly afford to die in one of our great cities! Funeral pageantry is not necessary. No one was ever more lovingly and tenderly put into the grave than Christ, but there were only four in the procession.

Again, standing in this place where the Lord lay, I am impressed with the fact that you cannot keep the dead down. The peal of the Sanhedrim, a regiment of soldiers from the tower or Antonio to stand guard, floor of rock, roof of rock, wall of rock, niche of rock cannot keep Christ in the

At the door of that tomb a fight took place which decided the question for all graveyards and cemeteries. Sword of lightning against sword of steel. Angel of God against the military. The body in the crypt begins to move in its shroud of fine linen and slides down upon the prevenent moves through vards of wall two coats, tinted or white. To test a wall coating, take a small quantity of it, mix in equal quantity of boiling water, and if it does not set, when left in the dish over night, and finally form a stone down upon the pavement, moves through the portico, appears in the doorway, comes up the marble steps. Christ, having left His mortuary attire behind Him, comes forth in the garb of a workman, as I take it, from the fact that the women mistook Him for like cement, without shrinking, it is a kalsomine, and dependent upon glue to hold it to the wall, the feature so strongly objected to by sanitarians.
