

THE DARLINGTON HERALD

Established July 16th, 1890.
Destroyed by Fire December 15th, 1890

Re-Established February 11th, 1891.

W. D. WOODS, Editor.

One Dollar a Year.

DARLINGTON, S. C.

Friday, February 10, 1893.

Mr. Childs' address will make some of his prohibition friends feel pretty slim when they read it carefully.

If the State dispenser is a temperate man, how can he select his whisky? He can't drink it and will have to buy it on the guarantee of the seller.

We hope in a future issue to have an article from the pen of an advocate of female suffrage, as we are anxious to present both sides of this as well as all other questions.

We will have to claim the indulgence of our readers again this week for issuing a small sheet, but everything will be in trim for the next week's issue, and we can promise them a good paper.

Somebody has nominated the editor of the Abbeville Medium for State dispenser, and while we have nothing whatever to say against his claims, we believe that Mr. John Gray Evans received the first nomination.

Manning Times: Some of the newspapers in the State have gone into convulsions over the speech of Congressman McLaurin. They seem to think it wrong for a representative of this State to give a truthful account of South Carolina's political history.

It is very possible that Mr. McLaurin may have thought he was telling the truth, but if he would read up a little in the political history of the State, he will find that he has a great deal to learn in this direction. There was no State in the Union that was better governed previous to the war than South Carolina, and even if we grant, for the sake of argument, that the majority were governed by the minority, it was simply a rule based on the intelligence and high character, and which ran through a long term of years without the least suspicion of dishonor attached to it. If the editor of the Times will divest himself of prejudice he will be forced to acknowledge the truth of what we say.

Senator Butler voted against the anti-option bill and Senator Irby for it. So it seems that in this matter Senator Butler is helping those who prey upon the industries of the people and Senator Irby is helping to rid the people of these pests. While such is the conduct of these two senators be it known that the Freeman is ready with commendation for Irby and condemnation of Butler.—Bunter Freeman.

The condemnation of our contemporary won't hurt Senator Butler, but it is outrageously unjust and undeserved, and is simply the utterance of a newspaper that is noted for its erratic course in politics and on social questions.

Senator Butler has done more for the people of South Carolina than his colleague will do if he lives to be as old as Methuselah. Even if we differed from General Butler we would still admire his courage in voting according to his convictions, without considering whether it suited the views of other people or not. To be perfectly candid, we think that he knows more about the subject under discussion than either Senator Irby or the editor of the Freeman.
