ORANGEBURG, S. C., OCTOBER 3, 1879.

Supreme Court and the Bond Question.

In June, 1877, the Legislature adopted a Joint Resolution which provided for the appointment of a Commission, to consist of members of the House and Senate, whose duty it should be to report upon the Bond indebtedness of the State. In due time this Commission made a full report which in their judgment asserted that the consolidated bonds and certificates were not issued in accordance with law. The Legislature, without affirming or disaffirming the decision of the Commission, passed another Joint Resolution providing for the establishment of what is known as the Court of Claims, which should have jurisdiction over any case made up and brought before it to test the validity of any of the consolidated bonds, coupons and certificates of stock mentioned by the Commission. The Attorney-General and his associates with the consent of the creditors of the State, made up a case or cases and brought them before the Court of Claims with the State as defendant. Upon the trial of these cases a majority of the Court rendered their judgment in favor of the State, and from these judgments the creditors appealed and carried the matters before the State Supreme Court.

The recent important decision of the highest tribunal known to the State seems, as near as we can gather from the elaborate report given, to confirm the judgment of the Court of Claims as to the validity of the consolidated bonds. The opinion was rendered by Associate Justice Melver, Chief Justice Willard concurring. Associate Justice Haskell dissents, holding that all the consolidated bonds are valid obligations of the State.

The decision affects all bonds and coupons issued on the authority of an Act authorizing a loan for the relief of the Treasury; all issued for exchange for conversion bonds; and such as were issued for exchange for the second issue of bonds under an Act authorizing a loan to pay the interest on the public debt—all amounting to some $2,407,514.

By an Act of the preceding Legislature the past indebtedness of the State was ordered to be funded by paying fifty cents on the dollar in new bonds. This decision, therefore, of the Supreme Court will save the issue of $1,204,757 in bonds, which will eventually be equal to that much actual money to be paid by the taxpayers of the State.

For the sake of getting the debt issue out of the next campaign we hope this decision will be accepted as the final settlement of the only question which is likely to divide the leaders of our State in the next election. It is not reasonable to suppose that the entire views of either the creditors or the representatives of the State will be met, but the decision is the voice of our highest court and the wisdom of our best judges, therefore, it does not become any class of our citizens to criticize in a captious spirit or peevishly to quarrel over a fruitless matter. Let the party, unburdened by such an issue, enter into the campaign in light marching order and victory will crown the efforts of the Democracy in 1880.

The Fair.

Well, what of it? Simply this. Are you going to attend, and will you carry anything for exhibition? If you intend to help the Fair, don't wait until it is too late to prepare because you have only a month to do it in. Every one has something he might take to the Fair, but will leave it at home because he thinks some one might have something better. This will do for those who have no interest in the prosperity of others or who are controlled solely by a desire to get a premium. If the Exhibition is to be supported only by those who are sure of a prize our fairs would not amount to much. Make it a point to bring something whether you are successful in taking a prize or not, and let that something be the best you have. If you are fortunate in securing a prize so much the better; if you fail, why don't get mad about it and enlist yourself among the opposers of fairs. Remember there is much merit in trying to deserve a prize, and where so many articles of the same kind are exhibited, only one can get the premium. Such a failure ought to be a lesson from which to learn the cause of your short-coming, so that next year you may prepare an article that will excel even the lucky one. We have seen in our travels about the county many articles of household economy that would compare favorably with those exhibited at fairs and yet the owners of them did not think it worth while to carry up the article. Many of our county friends would be surprised at the success of some trifling piece of work were they to place it on exhibition. Go to work now and think over the matter. One month is ample time in which to arrange and prepare articles intended for the Fair.

The Directors have kindly, and very wisely too, prepared a department for boys and girls. We hope that many of them will be found competing for premiums at our approaching Fair. There is no telling what nice work may be done by little willing fingers if they would only try. Sometimes old people are excelled by the children and there is no reason why this should not be the case at the next fair. Try, boys and girls, and show what can be done.

The chief object in going to fairs should not be to obtain prizes, but to see and to learn from the experience of others. We notice people running about from place to place trying to see everything in one day. This is impossible for there are hundreds of articles not only to be seen but to be examined and studied carefully which will consume the entire three days of the Fair. Such hasty work tires one down and when night comes he is unfit for anything. Sight seeing is a tiresome thing any way, and very seldom profitable. Think about the things you would like to see and arrange them with some system and then when you go to the Fair examine them thoroughly and profit by it; if you have time for sight-seeing then is the time to indulge in it, but not before you have learned all you wish. The experience of others is an easier and better teacher than our own and no where can we learn this lesson better than at our annual Fair.

A Bubble Exploded.

In a report of a recent visit to Blackville, "A. B. W.," in the News and Courier, exposes the ridiculous story put in circulation by Northern papers on the authority of Fred Nix, colored, postmaster at Blackville, that a conspiracy had been formed against him because of his color and politics, and came near culminating by taking his life. The whole matter ended in nothing more than a personal difficulty between Nix and a young lad eighteen years of age, by the name of Luther Williams, which resulted in a few shots and a scratch on Nix' person. The same thing might have happened in any Northern town under the same circumstances because no one seems to have been implicated except the two actually engaged. The entire published report was intended by Nix and his friends to excite the sympathies of the Northern people in his behalf and to arouse their passions against the Southern whites. This purpose signally failed and it is hoped that our Northern citizens have had enough of such reports by this time to receive them with many grains of allowance. Their leading men have associated with our leaders sufficiently to know that there is really no enmity between the races at the South. Northern white men in our midst are aware of the same truth, and, if they would allow existing causes to work out their legitimate results, society would soon free itself without violence of all turbulent elements. This process, if interfered with by political agitators, will only prolong the trouble and postpone the coming of peace and prosperity between the races. Thinking Northern men, living among us, can do much to elevate the moral tone of the race by guiding the colored sentiment in the true channel. Politics and superstition closely resemble each other in their effects upon ignorance, and a high moral education is the antidote for both.

Georgia's Impeachment Trial.

For some time the Senate of Georgia has been engaged in trying the case of Comptroller-General Wash

Goldsmith, on charges of malfeasance in office, and, after prolonged debate on the part of attorneys and Senators, both for and against the Comptroller-General, the High Court of Impeachment came to a vote last week and by an overwhelming majority pronounced General Wash Goldsmith guilty of appropriating the State's money to his own use. This vote will have the effect of expelling him from office and disqualifying him forever hereafter from holding any political position of profit or trust in the gift of his fellow citizens.

Mr. Goldsmith is said to be a man of a most amiable disposition and beloved and respected in his private life. His war record is untarnished, and the gallant part he played in the defense of his State is a subject of comment by all who know him. It is the almost universal opinion among his personal friends that his fall is directly due to the trickery of supposed friends, that he had been misled by those in whom he confided and that his purposes in committing the act was not to be guilty of wrongdoing. His error was one of misplaced confidence and not of the heart. Yet he was forced to leave his office and the Senate Chamber stripped of his honor and his citizenship.

Roads.

We hear considerable complaint about road-working, and the distance hands are obliged to go in order to perform this duty. In some cases our citizens travel six or even ten miles from home to work a public road over which they don't pass more than once or twice a year at most. There are several neighborhood roads in the county traveled more than public roads; especially is this the case when they pass through densely populated sections leading to the Court House or some point of trade like Branchville or Lewisville; and it is from such sections hands are generally called off to work distant public roads. Could not the road law be so changed as to allow these private roads to be worked by the persons living immediately upon them, when sufficient hands may be had living near public roads to keep them in order. Such a change in the law would benefit many sections of our county and open up highways to Orangeburg that could not be reached just now by Legislative enactment. We simply throw out these hints that persons interested may think about the practicability of the suggestions.

Notice.

H'DQUARTS THIRD BRIGADE,
Orangeburg, S. C., Sept. 26, 1879.
General Order.
No. 1, Series 1879.

I. In order to enable this Department to present a full and correct roster of the troops of the State to the Legislature in November next, it is necessary that the Captains of each company report directly to his Brigadier the following particulars:

- A. Name of company with present officers, names and date of Commissions.
- B. Number of efficient men.
- C. Whether uniformed or not.
- D. Whether armed, and if so, the number and kind of arms and whether State or private property.
- E. When companies are not attached to any Brigade the reports must be made to this office. General and field officers will also report their staff in making up the rosters of their respective commands. All officers will report through the regular channels.

By order Brig-Gen. James F. Izlar.
WM. V. IZLAR, A. A. G.

South Carolina Railroad stock, which for a long time was considered as having a merely nominal value, seems somehow to have regained a place (though a low one) in the market. For months past there has been a limited demand for it at irregular prices the offers of buyers ranging from $2 to $4 a share. To-day a Broad street broker advertises for 200 shares at $5—the highest price offered for many a day. It is understood that the purchases are made on Northern orders. What they mean nobody seems to know.—News and Courier, Sept. 22.

We think it means that the railroad is being managed in such a way by Mr. Fisher as to make its stock worth something, in the future, if not now. Had Mr. Fisher, or some other good rail road manager, been put at the head of this road at the close of the war, we verily believe its stock would now be above par instead of selling for the paltry sum of five dollars. We may be mistaken, but that is our honest opinion.

Blessed are the Peacemakers.

After a series of troubles and dis-appointments Messrs. J. J. Dargan and Joseph A. Earle returned to Sumter and the seconds were induced to place the correspondence of the two gentlemen in the hands of a board of honor for a final settlement.

The following is authentic:

"To the Honorable General Guignard Richardson, the friend of Colonel J. J. Dargan, and Mr. W. D. Blanding, the friend of Colonel J. H. Earle, having at my request submitted to us as mutual friends the correspondence between the gentlemen, we have adjusted the matter in issue between them honorably and satisfactorily to all parties.
