Diamonds Improved by Radium.
The influence of radio-emanations on the constitution of matter is very curiously illustrated in some recent experiments made by Sir William Crookes. According to the results, if radium comes to be a common commodity among us some dismay may be caused to those who wear diamonds on finding that the carbon crystal under the influence of radium threatens to return to its less attractive form of graphite or crystalline black carbon. On the other hand, radium may turn out to be a "diamond improver."

It is well known that radium emanations possess the property of darkening transparent bodies upon which they impinge; and now Sir William Crookes has shown that this also holds good in the case of diamonds. The emanations not only convert the surface into graphite but alter the color of the body of the stone. It is therefore suggested that this observation may prove to be of commercial importance. For example, "if off color stones can be lightened their value will increase, while if the prolonged action of radium is to communicate to them a decided color they would be worth much more as fancy stones." This may add considerably to the business of the jeweler who, for a consideration, might undertake to submit "off jewels" to burial in radium for a season.—The Lancet.

We Are the Richest.
The United States constitutes the richest nation on the globe. Mulhall furnishes these figures: United States $31,750,000,000, Great Britain $59,030,000,000, France $47,950,000,000, Germany $40,260,000,000, Russia $32,125,000,000, Austria $22,560,000,000, Italy $15,800,000,000, Spain $11,300,000,000. These computations are based upon values as shown by real estate records, buildings, merchandise and railways, as well as the circulating medium in each nation.

THOUGHT SHE WOULD DIE.

Mrs. S. W. Marine, of Colorado Springs, began to fear the Worst—Doan's Kidney Pills saved her.

Mrs. Sarah Marine, of 428 St. Ursula street, Colorado Springs, Col., President of the Glen Eyrie Club, writes:

"I suffered for three years with severe back ache. The doctors told me my kidneys were affected and prescribed medicines for me, but I found that it was only a waste of time and money to take them, and began to fear that I would never get well.

A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. Within a week after I began using them I was so much better that I decided to keep up the treatment, and when I had used a little over two boxes I was entirely well. I have now enjoyed the best of health for more than four months, and words can but poorly express my gratitude."

There is an anecdote concerning the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is now America's distinguished guest, told by Curtis Brown in Frank Leslie's Monthly: "No one ever called him good-looking. On one occasion, when he was Bishop of Rochester, a zealous, but somewhat maladroit cleric, intending to compliment him, remarked in the course of his speech: 'No one can say that our Bishop is ornamental, for—' But a roar of laughter, in which Dr. Davidson joined, prevented him from finishing the sentence."

PLUCK, ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE.

BESIEGED BY LIONS.

AN official report recently received from the managing director of a South African gold mine, situated not far from Pretoria, tells an extraordinary story of lions. It says: "About 5 o'clock on Sunday morning at least seven lions (counting the incoming spoors) attacked our goats, killing five and mauling three, and also one native. About 2 p. m. a boy turned up badly scratched, saying that a lion was eating his companion, so we all turned out, four of us, followed by about 100 Kaffirs. My three companions stirred up a lion about 200 yards northwest of the camp. They fired several shots, but missed, so we followed the spoor. Suddenly a huge lioness jumped up about sixty feet ahead of us. I fired and hit her in the chest. She turned on her hind legs away from me and made a jump for L. When she reached L a shot went off somewhere, and L. went down with the lioness on top of him. I did not fire for fear of hitting L. Two more shots went off, and the lioness left L, and I gave her another shot as she jumped a short distance into the bush. The affair lasted only a few minutes. L. got up and ran a short distance to the rear, and I hurried to attend to him. The lioness had torn his clothes and mauled his left arm. We carried him into camp, where he died a few minutes after our arrival.

"On Monday night we were again attacked by lions. I had put the remaining goats in the wagon shed and had three bushes piled up all around seven feet high, and had two lamps burning in the stable and the shed, but lions jumped over the thorn bushes, broke in the door, killed several goats, and stampeded the rest. We had to shoot mostly in the air for fear of killing the horses and mules in the stable. Great panic among the boys now, and they refuse to work on the night shift. Wednesday we were once more attacked, but the lions could do no damage, as we had set an armed guard in the stable. Judging by the spoors there were nine lions here on Sunday morning. I am securing the safety of the camp as well as possible. Boys are cutting brush and working day shift in the mine, but won't work at night. Lions have been trying to dig under the stable again.

"We had another attack about 10 o'clock at night. One lion was killed by the stable guard. I paid the boys the premium of £1 each. The lioness we shot is dead also, but there are at present too many lions in the bush for us to be able to get her skin. For the last three days and nights I have scarcely had six hours' sleep, but we hope soon to thin all these lions down. I have no food for the boys now except some bran. The entire camp and workings we have surrounded by a thorn bush hedge. Lions come near the camp even in daytime, judging from the peculiar howl and bark of the dog. Last night a single lion got into the camp. He kept very quiet. This morning we traced his spoor. He came in near my hut, walked down the row of huts, and went out near the dining-room hut."

THE GENIUS OF THE LAMP.

The title of "The Sultan of Sulu" has a comic opera sound which, a writer in Everybody's Magazine declares, is carried out by the appearance and behavior of this Oriental potentate. The Sultan and his suite were once entertained at luncheon on board a United States transport. None of them had ever been on board a large vessel before. The visit was full of surprise and excitement for them.

They looked the ship over at first with stolid interest, and the Sultan himself set off the six-pounder without flicking an eyelid. But at last, in the saloon, some one attempted to explain the mystery of the incandescent lamps, and there the natives were surprised out of their reserve.

Even the Sultan's face showed amazement when an army officer reached up and turned a lamp on and off repeatedly. His Highness ordered one of his suite to do it. The fellow's face went greenish for a moment, but, nevertheless, he reached up and tremblingly touched it as he would have a hot brand. When he found that it did not hurt him, and that the light actually obeyed the impulse of his fingertips, he was the most excited Moro in the archipelago. His excitement was contagious. Nearly every one in the suite started for a lamp on his own account, and the cabin was a bewildering of flashing lamps.

Presently Oriental cunning got the better of amazement, and one or two of them tried to fool the lamps. A fellow would steal quietly up to a bulb, and, reaching forward, suddenly turn it on, evidently with the intention of catching it napping. Or he would turn it off and jump away, apparently with the same intention. But the lamps refused to be fooled, and the facial expression that followed each failure was ludicrous to behold.

Of course, they wanted to know what made the light. It was impossible to give them a history of electrical development, but an officer present thought of giving them an object lesson that would prove a short cut to knowledge. He directed four or five of them to stand in line, holding hands. Then the men on the ends of the line were told to each grasp the brass part of a lamp. They did so, and instantly the entire line sustained an electric shock. They were too astonished to speak, and not knowing enough to let go, they just stood there, with wonder and fear surging from face to face.

The officers broke them apart at last and took them in to luncheon, but they were changed men. They had had an experience that passed all Oriental understanding.

The luncheon was a more or less dignified affair, varied by interpreted compliments and the agonies of the Sultan's official taster. It was easy to see that although the taster was an habitual necessity to the Sultan's peace of mind, on this occasion, at least, his function was purely perfunctory. Of what avail was the protection of a poor human taster against magicians who could make lamps to burn without oil, and who could send a genti of unrest to twitch one's body like the fever?

NEW GOVERNOR A HERO.

Sir William Macgregor, who has just been appointed Governor of Newfoundland, is one of the most remarkable men of the British Colonial service, both physically and intellectually, and, indeed, his herculean strength has contributed in no small degree to impress the savages, over whom he has been called on to rule in the past, with a sense of the power of the British Empire. No more remarkable illustration of his muscular force can be given than the feat which led Queen Victoria to bestow on him the Albert medal, which Sir William is the only Colonial Governor to wear, may be looked on as the civilian counterpart of the Victoria Cross.

It took place when he was High Commissioner and Administrator of England's possessions in the Pacific, with headquarters at Suva, the capital of Fiji. The Syria, with a shipload of Indian coolies on board, had struck on a rock at some distance from Suva. The only way by which the vessel, which was stuck on a reef at the foot of a precipice, and being pounded to pieces by the surf, could be reached, was by means of ropes and a broken mast, which had fallen against the side of the cliff. Again and again Sir William made the perilous journey to and from the wreck, either with a man or a woman on his back, and sometimes with a child held by its clothes between his teeth in addition thereto.

The greatest tax on his strength was, however, in connection with the rescue from the wreck of a white woman, who had got at the spirls, was mad with drink and had fallen overboard. The captain of the ship and a police officer, who had gone after her, were being swept out to sea. Sir William caused himself to be let down by a rope, caught the knot of the woman's hair in his teeth, and with his hands seized the two men and dragged them all three to safety. Then he wrote his report of the disaster and of the rescue. Several of those who had taken part in the latter received the Royal Humane Society medal. But as there was no mention in Sir William's report of his own services, or, in fact, of his having been upon the scene at all, it was not until much later that the matter was brought to the attention of the Government and by the letter to that of the Queen, who, as stated above, conferred on him the Albert medal. Sir William is a Scotch physician hailing from Glasgow.

BOY SAVES LIFE IN NIAGARA.

Within an hour Hughie McLean, fourteen years old, son of Donald McLean, owner of a large lumber yard in North Tonawanda, N. Y., rescued two boys from drowning in the Niagara River, at the risk of his own life, on a recent afternoon.

The first life saved was that of Harry Wagoner, twelve years old, who fell from a pile of lumber off McLean's wharf into the swift current of the Niagara River. Young McLean knew that Wagoner could not swim and quickly he was in after him. Wagoner was sinking for the second time when McLean caught him by the leg. Being an expert swimmer, McLean succeeded in keeping Wagoner up until taken from the stream by several men who had been drawn by the cries for help.

Young McLean went home in his father's automobile to get dry clothes. He was returning to the wharf less than an hour after, when he heard a splash in the river, then cries for help. He ran to the edge of the wharf, where several boys stood as though glued to the spot, and saw Henry Coyer, a boy of his own age, struggling in the water. Again McLean dived in the river, and after a brave fight succeeded in reaching one of the supports of the dock. Here he clung with Coyer's limp body in one arm until assistance arrived.

GIVES LIFE IN VAIN.

While Nathan Weiner, Barney Weiner, Mrs. Rose Krinsky, brothers and sister; Ida Lippman and Himey Isaacs, all of New York, were bathing at Long Hill, Conn., the boat they were using sprang a leak. In baling it out they all sat on one side. The boat capsized. All were thrown into the water.

Nathan and Barney Weiner rescued Ida Lippman, Himey Isaacs and Barney then tried to save Mrs. Krinsky. They got her near enough to the shore for Nathan to grasp her and pull her out, then Barney, exhausted from the effort, sank and was drowned.

Mrs. Krinsky lay on the ground about half an hour before help came. Then, in spite of all efforts of the physicians, she died.

Her husband was summoned from Bridgeport by telephone. Hiring a team, he drove furiously to Long Hill. In turning a corner near the scene of the accident, the carriage wheel came off and he was thrown out on his head and knocked senseless. He was brought too by the doctor, but seemed crazed.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."
Mrs. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started. The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.

Mrs. Lelah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony."

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints,—that bearing-down feeling, weak back, falling and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of those who have written the above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

CHICKENS EARN MONEY If you give them help. You cannot do this unless you understand them and know how to cater to their requirements, and you cannot spend years and dollars learning by experience, so you must buy the knowledge required by others. We offer this to you for only 25 cents. You want them to pay their own way even if you merely keep them as a diversion. In order to handle Poultry judiciously, you must know something about them. To meet this want we are selling a book giving the experience of a practical poultry raiser for (Only 25c.) treatment for 30 years. It was written by a man who put all his mind, and time, and money, in making a success of Chickens raising—not as a pastime, but as a business—and if you will profit by his twenty-five years' work, you can save many Chickens annually, and make your Poultry earn dollars for you. The point is, that you must be pure to detect trouble in the Poultry Yard as soon as it appears, and know how to remedy it. This book will teach you. It tells how to detect and cure disease; to feed for eggs and also for fattening; which Fowls to save for breeding purposes; and everything, indeed, you should know on this subject to make it profitable.
