

Where Women is Boss.
 Captain Tuckey was commissioned by the British government to explore the Kongo region in west Africa early in the nineteenth century. One of the discoveries made by the captain proves that a select few of the Kongo women had reached a stage beyond the utmost dreams of present day woman suffragists. The sovereignty of one tribe he found to be hereditary in the female line. Daughters of the mighty chief were allowed to choose their own husbands, over whom they became "most absolute mistresses and can even extend their prerogative to the selling of a refractory spouse to slavery." Little wonder, reflected the captain, that the honor of a royal alliance "is a matter of but little emulation among the gallants of the Kongoese court." As the chief had as many as fifty wives the demand for eligible partis for royal princesses was fairly steady.

A Graceful Getaway.
 Mr. Makinbrakes, who had been urged to stay for luncheon, was trying to make a graceful getaway. "Awfully sorry," he said, "and ever so much obliged, but I couldn't think of it. It's a lot of bother to have people drop in on you unexpectedly and to feel that you've got to invite them to stay and eat with you—er—just to be polite, you know—I mean that it's always a lot of bother for me, of course, particularly when—it happens to be somebody that you don't care for anyhow—speaking of myself, you understand—or perhaps I should say I don't mean myself in this particular case—well, anyhow, I have an engagement besides, or it would afford me great pleasure, I assure you, to—well, good afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Varney."—Chicago Tribune.

Circumlocution.
 The tiresome preacher finally finished his almost interminable sermon. The congregation had slowly filed out, save one man, who lagged behind to speak with the pastor. "Do you know, minister," he said in a confidential tone, "that your sermon this morning reminded me more of a wheel than anything else that I could think of?"
 "A wheel?" said the startled divine. "How could it do that?"
 "Oh, merely that in a wheel the longer the spoke is the longer is the tire."—Harper's Weekly.

The Unlucky Number.
 The judge, who is also a philanthropist in a small but practical way, was visiting the cells in a prison, talking sympathetically with the prisoners, some of whom he had sentenced. His efforts were generally well received, but one man was quite unmoved by his friendliness. He returned curt replies and resolutely refused to expand.
 "I'm no criminal," he said at last. "I'm only a victim."
 "A victim of what?" the judge inquired, with friendly interest.
 "A victim of the number 13; that's what I am."
 "A victim of the number 13?"
 "Yes—a judge and twelve jurymen."

Mr. McKinley's Flower.

Mr. McKinley was interested for many years in a girls' school in Ohio. When he was congressman and governor of Ohio political meetings often took him near the school, and he visited it when he could. On one of his visits he was made an honorary member of the class of '94. He was a loyal member and wore the class flower, a red carnation. The message of his nomination for president reached the class during a reunion. The girls rang the college bell and sent a telegram of congratulation and a box of carnations. Another box of the class flowers was sent on the day of Mr. McKinley's inauguration. It may be that this association accounts for Mr. McKinley's fondness for the red carnation, which has come to be the "McKinley flower"—Youth's Companion.

Milton.

Milton was born in 1608 and died in 1674. His first poem of note, "On the Morning of Christ's Nativity," was written in 1629. The "Paradise Regained" was finished a short time before his death. His literary labors covered forty-five years. His greatest poem was written by the hand of an amanuensis, and his most serious annoyance was the petulance of his daughters, who sometimes refused to write when he was in the mood to compose.
