ON WOFFORD'S CAMPUS IN THE CITY OF THE SPARTANS.

THE MUSIC FESTIVAL, BASE BALL AND OTHER THINGS DEAR TO HEARTS OF COLLEGIANS.

SPARTANBURG, April 27:—I dare say that there is no town of equal size South of Mason and Dixon's line with better educational facilities and moral institutions than this one. In 1854, Wofford College opened her doors in what was then of mere hamlet and without a railroad. Later, Converse College was founded and today the two colleges stand side by side for all that is virtuous in young manhood and young womanhood. There are four adequate public school buildings here with a force of 32 teachers, run with a fund of $17,000, amounting to $1.09 per scholar. Boys and girls are prepared for any university of today right here under the shadow of one of the best colleges in the South.

This has been an unusually gay week for the college boys and girls as well as for the Spartans and the visitors. For quite a while the town folks and students have anticipated the coming of the South Atlantic Music Festival, and to say that it has come and gone brings a feeling of sadness mingled with that of much joy and pleasure to all. Every train brought crowds of visitors and by Wednesday evening the city was crowded with music lovers from all parts of our own beloved State and sister States. This numbers the thirteenth annual visit of the Music Festival, but never before was it greeted by so many anxious persons, nor were there so many charming features. The entire business center was in festive apparel, and flags and variegated tapestries flaunted upon the gentle zephyrs. A myriad range of small electric globes lined East Main street from Morgan square to Converse College, a distance of one and one-fourth miles, and a passing aesthete would have thought that the star-lit heavens had been lowered to earth again. The spacious auditorium of the Converse damsels, heretofore too large, was packed to overflowing, and tickets for "artists' night" went to a premium of 300 per cent. But in spite of the many attractions at Converse, the Methodist boys were not forgotten, and the fates lavished plentifully amid our mirthful holiday.

Wednesday afternoon's gentle breezes brought sweet messages of love and cheer from afar. For many years the Wofford Methodists and Furman Baptists have been at outs upon the diamond, but the game that day restored cordiality between the "Game Cocks" and the "Bunters." Furman scored in the first and Wofford in the third. Each team played valiantly, but not until the seventh inning was either sufficiently strong, when with a last desperate stride for victory the Methodists broke by the Baptists and scored over them 2 to 1. That night all went to the opening programme at the "Verse" and listened with eager ear to the strains of music and the melody of the chorus girls.

Thursday's "low descending sun" brought a tranquil scene before Wofford boosters and the college rooters. The Clemson "Tigers" swooped down upon the Methodists and hurried them to utter defeat. Up until the fifth round both teams played admirably, but just then the "Game-Cock's" pitcher weakened and the "Tiger's" sent his low drops whizzing through the air. It seemed as though the Tiger had tasted flesh the way they raged, and the farmer boys trampled the old gold and black, notwithstanding the desperate struggle of the panting Cocks, until they had scored 10 to 1. In the mean time many had strolled around to the "Verse" where music and melody flowed freely. Mr Damrosch conducted the afternoon and evening entertainments so artistically rendered.

Friday's balmy breezes brought back the spirit of the trammelled Methodists and they rallied around the old gold and black to play again as men. It was at this time that the long victorious Newberry youngsters found a spirited nine and would have gone down in a first defeat had not the worthless umpire, whose money at stake, it is thought, meant more to him to steal the game from Wofford and give it to Newberry at 5 to 4.

The last afternoon concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra greeted a full house. The evening entertainment, better known as "artist night," was the consummation and best of all. Madame Sembrich, the famous enchantress, sang to hundreds in six dialects, and we all were sorry and sad to leave when she would sing no more. Thus it was that the Music Festival, so pleasing to all who know of it, came to a brilliant and superb close.

Some might think old Wofford asleep, but he who reads may learn.

Last evening the State Intercollegiate Oratorical association held its annual contest in the beloved Lander auditorium, Greenwood, S. C. The varied orations worked such charm upon the judges that they were unable to come to any decision last night; but after a long repose they re-assembled this morning and soon came to a decision. The medal was awarded to Mr Wallace Carson, Wofford's representative. We make it a rule here never to fall so low in the base ball scale or any scale but that we can make up in oratory.
