Graded School Items.

Almost all of our arrangements have been made for commencement. The literary society has decided to have a public meeting the Friday night before commencement, which will be from the nineteenth to the twentieth of May. The query for that meeting is: Resolved, that the immigration of foreign peoples to the United States is desirable. Mr Lonis Gilland has kindly consented to make us a talk, and Rev Mr Bishop has also accepted an invitation to open the exercises with prayer. Rev Mr Fulton of Darlington is going to preach the annual sermon and Dr Mann of Florence, who will be remembered with pleasure by many, has consented to make the address to the graduating class.

We wish to extend a cordial invitation to the honorary members of our society to attend the last meeting this year, which will be held next Friday afternoon.

The old saying, "Into each life some rain must fall"—and which, being revised, would read, "Upon each picnic crowd some rain must fall"—was certainly fulfilled last Saturday, much to the discomfort of some of the jolly picnickers. The lower grades had a picnic out at Mr Fulton's, which was enjoyed by those participating. The seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth grades decided to go a little farther and thus went to that most delightful spot, the Red Hill. Even if nothing else had been enjoyed, the scenery would have amply repaid any one for going.

On last Saturday morning about thirty-five eager little (?) hearts were gladdened when they awoke and saw that the weather promised to be fair. For was this not the day that we were all to go to the long-talked-of picnic at the "Red Hill"? We first met at the school building—and it must be understood that we were kept straight by the ever-watchful teachers, Profs. Hallman and Bethea and Miss Ross, who were the only teachers present—and promptly at ten o'clock one wagon started and then others followed.

It would have done any one good to be along and hear the happy voices as they sang, "Dixie Land," "Good-bye, My Lover, Good-bye," "Maryland," "Hang John Brown on a Sour Apple Tree," and other lively songs, as they drove along through the picturesque fields covered with masses of beautiful wild flowers. Since our wagon was somewhat delayed, owing to some misunderstanding about the conveyances, it was rather late when we started; and as it was a long drive, we got very hungry and, at the suggestion of some very sensible person, opened one box of good things. Every one can readily imagine how we enjoyed that. Some of our more superstitious friends were delighted when they saw a ghost in the person of a "scare-crow" in Mr Shaw's cornfield.

After reaching the grounds we all played some games, even though there was an abundance of caterpillars and lizards. Imagine our delight when some one told us that Captain Constine was down there with the "Mercedes"! Nothing can be more pleasant than drifting along upon the glassy surface of Black river on a balmy spring day; and, indeed, some of the most enthusiastic even remarked that they would be willing to row down that beautiful stream forever, provided they had a certain other person to row down it with them. A very careless remark! Then, after enjoying this for a little while he steered for the shore and there our teachers showed us, much to our delight, I assure you, that they could excel every one else in foot-races and rope-jumping.

Now came another good part of the day—the dinner. We had all sorts of good things; such as chicken, barbecue, rice, pickles, biscuits, sandwiches, cakes, pies, crackers and coffee. After dinner we had another course; this time lemonade and cake.

Capt. Constine was then kind enough to take us for another one of those delightful trips on the "Mercedes." After landing again more games were played and some of the "older and more dignified ones" went down to the river's brink to tell stories, trusting to this enchanting spot to inspire them. And, indeed, it certainly must have, for what visible power on earth could cause all those things to happen in a certain small mountain town, of which the writer told? We then played a few more games and sat down to rest and to chat, mayhap the last time forever at Black River.

We were all sorry when the lowering clouds warned us that it was time to set out for Kingstree again. Nevertheless, we all got into the wagons and after going about a mile, a heavy rain came and many were the sun-hats which served a double purpose—keeping off sun and rain. But this was part of the fun, and as it is a thing of the past now, we must get to work on a far less pleasant subject—geometry examination.

NEWS NOTES FROM SCRANTON.

Saw Mill and Ginnery Burned—Scranton's First Auto—Personal, Social.

SCRANTON, May 6:—The cotton gin, saw, and grits mill at this place, belonging to Mr W J Willoughby, was completely destroyed by fire a few nights ago and the loss is very heavy. Mr Willoughby says that it will amount to at least $3,500. The property was insured for only $1,200. It is thought that the fire was of incendiary origin, as the mill had not been run for three or four days, but no arrests have been made.

Mr Troy J Lynch of Cowards spent Saturday and Sunday in town with his brother, Dr W S Lynch.

Miss Rosa Tallevast, of this section, went to Hartsville Friday to spend a few days with friends.

The Ladies' Temperance Union, or Sewing Society, of this place, enjoyed themselves very much at a quilting last Wednesday which was given in the spacious hall over Lynch's drug store. They completed three quilts of handsome colors and skillful handwork. But, best of all, the writer and other friends were favored with an invitation to the dinner prepared by the fair hands that plied the needles. About two o'clock the bell rang and all entered the hall where were ranged a bevy of beautiful young ladies, and were ushered to the table, which was loaded with every variety of nice eatables, all of which was enjoyed by everyone.

Dr W C McKnight and Mr Fred Cowards, paid friends at Cowards a pleasant call Sunday evening.

Dr W S Lynch has purchased a very handsome automobile, which will be No 1 for Scranton.

Never doubt old Scranton, for it is one among the best little towns in the South, although our trolley car line has not yet been completed.

Scranton's public school closed last Friday, to the regret of many school boys and girls. The school was taught by Mrs L H Little, who was liked by all the children.
