WILLIAMSON PLAN APPLIED TO COTTON.

IT IS CLAIMED THAT MORE THAN A BALE TO THE ACRE CAN BE PRODUCED.

It has been the ambition of every farmer in the South to make at least one bale of cotton to the acre. Very few of them have ever tried to make more than one bale to the acre. It can be done. And from recent experiments it looks as though the time is not far distant when the new "Williamson Plan" will be used by every farmer in the South. In writing of his experiments, B M Hudson of Camden says:

"As the 'Williamson corn method' has been such a blessing to South Carolina and as I have been accused of withholding what information I have had on the subject for 'selfish motives,' I want to say to the farmers of South Carolina that the Williamson method is just as necessary for cotton as for corn. "On the average lands of South Carolina it is impossible to make a full crop of cotton if you have an early spring crop, and this I say after years of experience. I have noticed this year my own crop and several others and find that the best cotton today was the poorest the first of July, and the best cotton we had in this country in June is the poorest now compared to what it should be.

"While this may be doubted by some, I can prove my assertion by some of the leading men of the county. The method is simple and, unlike the Williamson method of corn, will apply to a large amount of fertilizer, a small amount or none at all.

"Plant the first week in April, plant and cultivate flat; your crop will grow slowly in the spring, but will grow in July and August, when your neighbor's has failed. Yours will fruit close and make at least a third more than cotton planted on a bed and worked to get a quick growth in June.

The best crop in this section today was considered a failure the first of July. This is the method by which I made 163 bales of cotton on 150 acres and will do as well or better this year.

"I write not for notoriety, but that I may be of some benefit to any fellow farmers.

If I was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt I would never give my experience to the public.

At 12 cents a pound 163 bales averaging 500 pounds would be $9,780.00 for the ginned cotton. Think what a big thing that would mean for the South! If the "improved method" of planting cotton is successfully tried and promoted by the majority of farmers in South Carolina next year there will be such an increase in yield, and consequently in money value, that it is almost beyond figures.

And the fleecy cotton is not all to be considered. Think of the increased yield of cotton seed. With the growing demand for cotton seed it will not be many years now before many cotton planters will be trying to increase the yield of their cotton seed. Along this line a prominent cotton seed expert, who was addressing a crowd at the Jamestown exposition recently, said:

"Last summer I had the pleasure of introducing my friend, Professor Dolbear, who is, perhaps, our greatest living scientist, to one of my friends, a cotton seed oil official. In a semi-serious way Professor Dolbear referred to seedless fruits and suggested the creation of seedless cotton. 'Professor,' the oil man ejaculated, 'you had better make a cottonless seed, for that's where the money is.'"

Snake Story from Florence.

Negro killed from Bite of an Unusually Large Rattler.

FLORENCE, September 19:—A well-known engineer on the Atlantic Coast Line, informed The News and Courier correspondent this morning of a most interesting snake story.

One day last week Section Master Matthews, of the Mount Holly section, on the Northeastern railroad, had his gang of hands at work cutting down bushes on the right of way near a swamp three miles south of Strawberry. One of the hands, John Jenkins, a negro, who was cutting some small sweet gum bushes near the stump of an old tree, all of a sudden he felt something strike him on the leg, and as he looked he saw the head of a monster snake, a rattler, lying about three feet from him. Knowing that he had been bitten, he rushed from the bushes and hallooed "snake." The other negroes rushed from the bushes and to Jenkins' assistance. It was soon found that Jenkins had been bitten on the leg and he was placed on a handcar and hurried to Mount Holly, where some whiskey was procured and poured down the negro, who in that time, just seven minutes, was beginning to suffer agonies from the poison. A physician was sent for from Summerville, but it was some time before he could reach the sick man, and the result was that he died several hours afterward.

Mr. Matthews, the section master, as soon as he reached Mount Holly, and after baring the negro's leg, measured the place where the snake had stuck his fangs in the leg, just below the knee, and by actual measurement it showed that the two fangs in the upper jaw measured two inches apart and the distance between the upper and lower jaw, where the fangs entered was just 4 1/4 inches, showing that it must have been a monstrous snake indeed to have such a very large mouth.

In the excitement when the negro was bitten no one had presence of mind, or took the time to kill the snake, and when the party returned the snake had moved away and could not be found.

Where it lay in its bed and where the negro stood were just two and one-half feet apart, showing that the reptile was of unusual length, or it would have been impossible to have struck his object so far away.

Where the reptile had lain in the bushes he had made a bed some five feet in diameter. An effort is to be made to capture the monster reptile by a party of snake hunters and if secured he will be placed on exhibition.
