A CURIOUS CONTEST.

Ox Race That is Run Under Peculiar Conditions.

A race that in a peculiar sense is not to the swift is one that is run, if the word may be used in such a connection, every year in the provincial districts of Germany.

Early in May during the celebration of a festival that to a certain extent corresponds to the English May day an ox race is held. The entrance fee is small, but the conditions are peculiar. Each ox must be ridden by its owner and ridden bareback. No whip, spur, yoke, harness or any means of guiding the animal is allowed. The rider must depend entirely upon his voice to accomplish the end he has in view, and as the oxen do not race on a track, but across a large open field, the training of the animals and the skill of the rider are severely tested. Speed is a secondary consideration in this race, for the rider who can induce his steed to go in a straight line is sure to win. The start is made at one side of a field a mile square, the finish at the opposite side.

When the competitors are lined up and the signal is given the fun begins. Despite the efforts of the riders the majority of the oxen refuse to head toward the opposite mark, and as spectators are allowed in the field and are at liberty to do anything they wish to interfere with the rider except touch him or his mount the difficulties of the race are not inconsiderable.

As is well known, oxen are not as a rule excitable beasts. But when they are confronted by the shouts of the spectators and the general hullabaloo that always ensues at such affairs as well as the exciting efforts of the riders to control them they are soon reduced to a state of complete bewilderment. It often happens that an hour has passed before one of the oxen has succeeded in getting "under the wire."

But when once the task is accomplished the winning rider is fully repaid for his pains. His ox is surrounded by the enthusiastic spectators and decorated with garlands and flowers, and the lucky owner receives a cash prize.—Pittsburg Post.

Lady of the Lamb.

In a certain Oxfordshire village there was formerly on the Monday after Whitsun a custom of providing a fat live lamb to be competed for by the maidens of the parish, the conditions being that each lass should have her thumbs tied securely and should run after the lamb with open mouth. She who succeeded in catching hold of and retaining the lamb by means of her teeth was declared the winner. After having been dressed with the skin on the animal was then slung on a long pole and was carried in front of the successful candidate to the village green, where music and dancing were the order of the day. The following day a third of it was baked, a third boiled and the remainder roasted and distributed among the lady's companions, who sat at table with her, she being designated Lady of the Lamb.—Modern Society.

Political Platforms.

No political party held a national convention prior to 1831 or adopted a platform of principles prior to 1832. Before these dates nominations were made by congressional caucuses and by the several legislatures. The anti-Masonic party was the first to hold a national convention. This was convened in Baltimore on Sept. 26, 1831. It named William Wirt for president, but adopted no platform. This example was followed by the Whigs, who met in December of the same year and put Henry Clay in nomination, but framed no declaration of principles. It was not until the Democratic party met in convention, also in Baltimore, on March 22, 1832, that the modern custom of stating the issues of the campaign was inaugurated.

Serves a Good Purpose.

Caller—I sent you a poem about three weeks ago. What have you done with it?

Editor—I'm holding it. Every little while lately I get to thinking that we are not getting out as good a paper as we ought to, and then I take that poem and see how much worse the sheet might be, and that makes me cheerful again. Say, how much'll you take for it?—Chicago News.

Cutting.

"Got anything you want sharpened, gents?" inquired the aged peddler with the razor paste.

"Yes," replied the smart youth at the desk near the door; "you can sharpen our wits if you want to, old man."

"Got to have something to work on, gents," the old man said as he looked round the room, shook his head pityingly and walked away.—Kansas City Independent.

CLERK OF DISPENSARY BOARD

Makes Caustic Reply to Portions of Grand Jury Presentment.

Editor COUNTY RECORD:—Permit me, dear sir, through the columns of your valuable medium to make known to the people of our county and State that the presentment of the grand jury made at the recent term of court is the result of incompetency. Inasmuch as they have made a report to the effect that for reasons of the style and manner of book-keeping they were unable to ascertain the exact condition of the several dispensaries in our county, this is due to the fact that the expert accountant employed by the grand jury and the committee of investigation were not competent to understand the common sense system of book-keeping that is required by the State dispensary auditor. We beg to state that the books of the county dispensary board will show upon proper investigation the minute details of the business, giving an accurate account of the smallest and largest items of business as transacted by the board. Therefore it is not rational to suppose that any human being can ascertain the condition of such a business in the small space of two hours, or can make an accurate account of the transactions of such a business by a general statement when so many small items are of the greatest importance and consideration. We also beg to state that the books of the Williamsburg county dispensary board have been twice checked by the State dispensary auditor and found in perfect condition.

Our quarterly statement as published in this paper last week is an accurate, simple and compact compilation of the accounts of the several dispensaries, respectively, as taken from the books in the office of the Williamsburg county dispensary board, which statement shows a disbursement of net profits in excess of the gross profits as calculated by the expert accountant of the grand jury for the entire time of the county dispensary since its beginning, April the 18th, to September the 1st. This report does not give the small details of the business as a matter of economy in publication; but it is a very simple summary of the details of the business and can be easily understood by the most ignorant of mankind. This report has received the sanction and approval of the State dispensary auditor with perfect and entire satisfaction.

The books of the Williamsburg county dispensary board are open to public inspection to whomsoever they may concern and it will give me pleasure to demonstrate to any one who may so desire the common sense style of book-keeping as it therein employed.

Thanking you for the space thus granted me and this manner of giving the proper information to the public, I remain,

Very respectfully,
J D GILLAND,
Clerk to the Board.

Kingstree, S C, October 11, 1907.

Notice is hereby given that J. W.
