KINGSTREE DRY GOODS COMPANY

"Running Some."

Sunday night between 8 and 9 o'clock, a horse hitched to a buggy dashed into town, via Main street, at a 2:40 clip. When it reached the Williamsburg Livestock Co's stables, the horse suddenly veered to the left and ran into the closed doors at the entrance of the stables, actually breaking through them. The buggy was unoccupied and strange to say neither the horse nor the vehicle was seriously damaged. It was subsequently learned that the horse belonged to Mr J M Nexsen and had gotten away with the buggy at his store three and a half miles east of town. It is supposed that the horse covered the whole distance in a run, but no one kept tab on his speed.

THE FIRST BOYCOTT.

English Weavers Leagued Against the Scotch in 1527.

The trade boycott is by no means of as recent origin as some people suppose, nor is it of Irish extraction. Among the early boycotts which strongly suggest the modern institution is one that hails from north England and is chronicled in Brand's "History of Newcastle." This had its inception in a dread of Scotch competition. On Aug. 31, 1527, in the corporation of weavers in Newcastle a number of regulations were adopted, among them that "no member shall take a Scotchman to apprentice or set any of that nation to work under a penalty of 40 shillings." More than this, to call a brother "Scot or mansworn" involved a forfeit of 6s. 8d., "without any forgiveness."

The canny Scotch doubtless did not delay to pay back the English in kind, but it is nearly two centuries later before any record appears of the extent to which this commercial feud raged between the two peoples or as to the reprisals that were made by the "blue bonnets over the border."

In 1752 a sort of covenant was entered into by the drapers, mercers, milliners and other tradesmen and shopkeepers of Edinburgh to cease all dealings with commercial travelers from England, then called "English riders." The language of this covenant runs: "Considering that the giving of orders or commissions to English riders or clerks of English houses when they come to this city tends greatly to the destruction of the wanted wholesale trade thereof, from which most of the towns in Scotland used to be furnished with goods, and that some of these English riders not only enhance the said wholesale trade, but also correspond with it and sell goods to private families and persons at the same prices and rates as if to us in a wholesale way, and that their frequent journeys to this place are attended with high charges, which consequently must be laid on the cost of those things we buy from them, and that we can be as well served in goods by a written commission by post (as little or no regard is had by them to the patterns or colors of goods which we order them to send when they are here), therefore, and for the promotion of trade (?), we hereby voluntarily bind and oblige ourselves that in no time coming we shall give any personal order or commission for any goods we deal in to any English dealer, clerk or rider whatsoever who shall come to Scotland."

To this document, with its naive pretense that it is for "the promotion of trade," is added an obligation to have "no dealings with any people in England who shall make a practice of coming themselves or sending clerks or riders into Scotland." The penalty for violating this agreement was set down to be £2 2s. for every offense.—Indianapolis News.

In these physical culture days some people display great agility in dodging taxes.

MUST HAVE A TROUSSEAU.

An English Maiden Who Lost Her Betrothed by Waiting.

A few years ago in England I had a little maid, aged twenty-nine years, who had been engaged to be married many years. "Are you engaged?" I asked her when she came to seek the situation I had advertised, for if she was shortly to leave me to be married I decided that I would prefer an unengaged maid.

"Yes, madam," she answered respectfully. "I have been engaged eight years." Somehow I never feel afraid of any outcome but a weariness to both parties when I hear of an eight year engagement, so I took the little maid on. One day I found her crying over the blacking of my walking boots. Inquiring the cause of her distress, she sobbed:

"Oh, madam, I never can save the $350, no matter how hard I try!"

"What $350?" I asked.

"The $350 to get married with! I've tried eight years to be economical. I've to 'elp my mother, and I've only $95 in the postoffice savings bank!"

"And why must you have $350?" I asked kindly.

"For clothes and linen, madam," she said.

"It is not necessary," I said. "I can tell you how to buy all you need for $50, and that will leave you $45 to lay aside for use after marriage or on a rainy day."

"No, madam. I 'ope I know what is proper and becoming in a bride!" she said, almost freezingly.

A few months later I found her weeping again. "E's broke it hoff!" she said. "E wouldn't wait. E's going to marry another girl, and I 'ad five tablecloths ready 'emmed and six pillowcases, all 'emstitched."

It was pathetic, but who could blame the man, now thirty-five years old, who had by that time waited nearly ten years for her to save enough money for her trousseau? He could well have provided all that was needed for their station in life, and he wanted a home—and, besides, the little maid at thirty was looking old and worn with much self denial and trouble over the saving of the coveted $350.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald

Monster Nests.

In Australia are to be found the largest, heaviest and most peculiar nests in the world. These are the nests of the jungle fowl, so called, and are built in the form of great mounds, the average measurement in height being fifteen feet and the circumference 150 feet. The nests are erected in secluded, sheltered spots, and, as in the case of the small nests of birds, they are skillfully interwoven with leaves, grass and twigs and such other suitable material as the fowl may be able to procure. A similar system in the construction of nests is followed by the bush turkey, whose home is, however, more comprehensive in design. Its shape is pyramidal. It has been asserted by Australian naturalists that the nests of the bush turkeys, which live in colonies, are so large that to move them requires the services of six or seven men.—Chicago Record-Herald.
