SAVING EWE LAMBS FOR FUTURE BREEDING

At the experiment station of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college, Stillwater, Okla., an interesting experiment in sheep breeding is being conducted under the supervision of Professor Linklater. Three flocks, consisting of fifty Dorsets, twenty-five Shropshires and twenty-five Delaine-Merinos respectively headed by highly bred rams, have been purchased for the purpose of interbreeding and the eventual selection of a type that will more effectually meet the needs of southwestern sheep breeders.

As the Dorset is pre-eminently a mutton sheep and noted for prolificacy in the dropping of lambs, it is hoped that a cross with the other two strains will produce a breed that combines a high quality of wool and the conformation for mutton purposes; also the dropping of lambs to hit the early spring markets. The outcome of these experiments will be watched with interest by stockmen, as the farm sheep is gaining in popularity over the whole southwest and is proving a money maker.

Dehorning Dairy Animals.

Dehorning is now so universally practiced that a grade herd with horns is seldom seen in this country. Many pure bred herds are now dehorned, and I am sure the time is not far distant when all will be. writes a correspondent of the Homestead. I knew for years before I did come to it that I ought to dehorn my herd, but in 1900 and 1901 I had my best cow and another good one ruined by being gored in the udder, so in the spring of 1902 I dehorned the whole herd, using the clippers. If I had it to do over again I would by all means use the saw for old animals, as much less bleeding results. Since that time I have dehorned the calves when from one to four weeks old, using caustic soda or caustic potash, and when carefully done and it is no trouble to do it right it leaves the head in as good shape as on a polled animal and really better, as there is less of the poll.

COLORFUL DUELS.

Queer Initiatory Ordeal of New Art Students in Paris.

The most curious of the many practical jokes perpetrated by the art students in the Latin quarter is a kind of initiatory ordeal which the two newest comers of a class are sometimes compelled to undergo by their fellow students of the Beaux Arts. It is a painters' duel, in which neither combatant, no matter how small his experience nor how great his nervousness, need fear for a fatal termination.

The reluctant duelists are provided with tall stools and seated opposite each other at arm's length. They wear old clothes, and in the hand of each is placed a large paint brush charged with color, the one dipped in prussian blue, the strongest and most vivid of azure tints, and the other in carmine lake, which is a fine rich crimson. The word is given, and the two men begin to daub. Being usually strangers to one another and without the least cause of quarrel, they commonly show at first a great deal of caution and consideration, not to say timidity, and do not make much effort to inflict conspicuous streaks or to touch each other's face.

Soon, however, one or the other gets a smear which he does not like and attempts to retaliate upon his opponent. Then the contest waxes warm. The spectators hasten to take sides and urge on their favorite with shouts, cheers and encouraging cries. The tall stools totter; the wet brushes spatter; the antagonists daub more and more fiercely and furiously until frequently men, stools and all go down together in a struggling red and blue heap upon the floor. The duelists are then assisted to their feet, shake hands, laugh at each other's appearance and adjourn to the lavatory, where they good naturedly help each other to remove the traces of the conflict. The knight of the red brush is found to have smeared his adversary until he might pass for a hero of the goriest field of history, while the victim of the blue brush, if only blue blood were a fact instead of a figure, might pose for a survivor of an equally desperate fight.

It speaks well for the temper and good comradeship of the students that so rough a kind of fun ends where it begins, in the mock duel, and never, it is said, leads to resentment or ill will.—New York Press.

Seeking Asylum.

A city gentleman was recently invited down to the country for "a day with the birds." Whatever his powers in matters of finance, his shooting was not remarkable for its accuracy, to the great disgust of the man in attendance, whose tip was generally regulated by the size of the bag.

"Dear me," at last exclaimed the sportsman, "but the birds seem exceptionally strong on the wing this year."

"Not all of 'em, sir," came the remark; "you've seen the same bird this last down times. It's follerin' you about, sir."

"Following me about? Nonsense! Why should a bird do that?"

"I dunno, sir, I'm sure," replied the man, "unless he's 'angin' round for safety!"—London Ideas.

Swimming Boards.

Swimming boards are much in use by the natives of the Sandwich Islands. A swimming board is simply a large, flat, fin shaped board, usually about five feet in length and from one to two feet in width. It is used especially for passing through the surf. In most cases the islands of the Sandwich group are of coral formation and surrounded by dangerous reefs, which make it extremely dangerous to land. By clinging to his swimming board, however, the native has the advantage of being able to use all his strength in propelling himself forward.

GO RIGHT AT IT.

Friends and Neighbors in Kingstree Will Show You How.

Get at the root of the trouble. Rubbing an aching back may relieve it.

But it won't cure it. You must reach the root of it—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it; reach the cause; relieve the pain. They cure, too, so Kingstree people say.

Mrs E E King, W Main St, Kingstree, S C, says: "I found Doan's Kidney Pills to be a valuable remedy. I was afflicted for some time with dull, nagging backaches, often accompanied by pains in my loins and kidneys. I did not rest well and mornings upon arising, I felt tired and languid and had no ambition to begin the day's work. The kidney secretions were so irregular in passage that I concluded my kidneys were out of order and hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box at Scott's drug store. I took them as directed and they helped me in every way. I am now free from the pains in my back and my kidneys are normal."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.
