MISS JACKSON'S

It was the day before St. Valentine's day, and it seemed as if a demon of mischief had taken possession of every scholar in the Pineville public school. Miss Taylor, the teacher, sigh ed as she rapped on her de k for order. Never had the children been so upruly before. Instead of attending to their gry lessons the boys and girls were whis-

When Miss Taylor rapped they became quiet and went on with their lessons. In a few minutes the noise started again. Miss Taylor looked up quickly and saw one of the larger boys trying to hide a picture.

"Well, Adam," she called, "bring me that picture." When the boy handed Miss Taylor the picture all of the scholars laughed. There on a piece of coarse paper was a picture of an old lady. Underneath the picture were some rude verses about cranky old maids and

"Well, what were you going to do with this picture? Where did you get it?" asked the teacher.

Some of us boys bought it to send to Miss Jackson tomorrow. You know she is a cranky old maid. She is always scolding us boys for tormenting her old black cat. We never hurt the old thing. We only have some fun with it," replied the boy.

"Go to your seat, Will. I will keep this ugly picture. I am very sorry to find that any of my scholars would play such a mean trick on an old person. I will tell you the story of Miss Jackson's life-why she is living alone," said Miss Taylor.

When Miss Jackson was a young woman her mother died, leaving a large family of children. As Miss Jackson was the oldest the burdens of the family fell upon her shoulders. She worked and slaved for those children from morning until night. When they became men and women they married and left home, but of course no one wanted Miss Jackson. They said she was old and cranky. They forgot that she had spent her life working for them. With a few hundred dollars that she had received from her father's estate Miss Jackson bought the little cottage next to the school, where she now lives. selves, for they remembered the comic valentines they had sent on former Valentine days.

"I think that if we each contribute 5 cents we would have enough money to buy a pretty bunch of flowers for Miss Jackson. How many are in favor of sending her flowers for a valentine?" asked Miss Taylor. Every hand was raised.

The next morning Miss Jackson sat in her lonely kitchen knitting. The cat was asleep under the stove. Miss Jackson was thinking about her past life and the ungratefulness of her brothers and sisters when she heard a knock at the door. She looked out of the window and saw some of the school children standing by her gate. "It's another valentine from those children. I only get comic ones," muttered Miss Jackson as she opened the Imagine her surprise when she found a large pasteboard box on the doorstep. Miss Jackson opened the box carefully, for she was afraid there was some trick about it. There was a son, from the teachers and scholars of For sale by all dealers.

Miss Jackson was pleased with the gift. The children said to Miss Taylor, "We feel much happier than we would if we had sent an ugly picture to Miss Jackson."

"Not exactly, but when I first began calling there was a mat at the door with the word 'Welcome' woven in it and a motto on the wall that read 'Let Us Love One Another.' Later I noticed that the doormat was changed for one that said Wipe Your Feet and a motto declaring that Early to Bed and Early to Rise Make a Man Healthy, Wealthy and Wise had the place of the other."

Story of a Stork

A Warsaw journal relates the following story of an experiment made by a Polish nobleman to ascertain how far storks migrate during the and several did fall. Luck of a Photographer In Getting a Wonderful Picture.

One of the most remarkable photographs ever obtained was that of the actual exploding of the bomb which was thrown at the king and their wedding.

"You don't call on Miss Cutting the operator secured three pictures. He then readjusted the camera so as to get a good picture of the king and queen in their carriage, which was about ten yards from him.

At the instant that the operator pressed the ball and exposed a plate a dark object was hurled at the royal carriage from a balcony window, and then followed instantly a blinding flash and a noise like a thunderclep. The operator was hurled half stunned to the ground, his camera following him. When he was able to stand he saw a terrible scene below him. The large crowd was stampeding in all direc-
