Note the page advertisement of S Marcus in this issue of The Record. It is scarcely worth our while to call attention to the big sale he has put on for the next 30 days, which is his custom so to do twice a year, as their popularity has been so well established. We will say, however, that Mr Marcus is offering some most attractive bargains and we are confident that he will in every way conform to the letter of his advertisement.

The biggest advertisement The Record has ever carried for a single issue is that of Jenkinson Bros Co, which appears in this paper. This is doubtless the largest space ever taken by a firm or individual in any newspaper published in Williamsburg county. This enterprising firm is not taking this big space merely to make a show, however. They are advertising a big clearance sale and need the space to tell about the great bargains they are offering. They have some splendid offerings in this advertisement and it will pay prospective buyers to read every word.

This lot for several years past has been an exhibition ground for sundry and varied amusements and gaming operators, and only a few days ago it was occupied by a large Coney Island merry-go-round.

NEGRO DETECTIVE BEATEN. Several Arrests Made and Parties Fined $400.

The peace and dignity of the good citizens of Kingstree, and especially its Mayor and Aldermen, were sorely disturbed when it became known on Wednesday of last week that a negro employee of the High Point Detective agency had been severely maltreated by a party of Kingstree men. The negro was employed by the town to ferret out and apprehend blind tigers and illicit traffic in liquor within its corporate limits, and from developments in the case it appears that the negro was getting close behind some of the traffickers, when on Monday night week he was himself taken into custody, bound and lead out of town under cover of darkness and severely whipped. The man made his way to Columbia, headquarters of the High Point agency, and reported to Chief J W Ashburn what had happened. Thursday Mr Ashburn came to Kingstree, bringing the negro and several other detectives with him. They set to work and a little later several arrests were made.

The parties arrested were identified by the negro as being among those who committed the assault upon him and were brought to trial before Mayor Kinder Saturday morning. The defendants entered a plea of guilty and through their counsel, E L Hirsch and LeRoy Lee, Esqs, a compromise was effected, the matter being settled by the payment of fines aggregating $400.

Chief J W Ashburn and his four detectives left Kingstree Saturday night, satisfied with the result of their work here.

Loyalty of the Fan. Declaring that it doesn't pay to overplay a good thing, Howard Cannitz tells a good yarn concerning an incident that occurred when he pitched for Dick Kinsella's Springfield club. "We had a veteran pitcher," Cannitz says, "who hadn't been going very well. He lost a couple of games, and the management released him. That afternoon he was to take a 3:15 train for home and went to the bench to bid the boys good-bye. Then with his grip in hand he started across the field for the clubhouse. The bleachers saw him going. He had been rather popular around there, so the fans stood up and shouted: "Good luck to you, old sport! Hope you get going again and come back to us!"

"This cheered the old boy, and he delayed his departure. 'If I can get them to do that tomorrow maybe the manager will relent and give me another chance,' he thought. "So the next day, with grip in hand, he started across the field again. All of a sudden the bleachers got up as one man and yelled: "You darned old stiff, haven't you gone yet?" — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Sorrow and I. Have I known sorrow? Yea, sorrow hath been my guest, Hath walked beside in the morn, And comforted and the quiet eve. And often lingered in my dreams Till her pale face familiar came. Do I hate sorrow? Nay, sorrow hath brought me strength And calmness, and silent walking In the shadow of her somber robes, With trust in him who guides aright, Hath led me into glorious light. —Eliza M. H. Abbott.

A Literal Rendering. A Scotch lady gave her servant very particular instructions regarding visitors, explaining that they were to be shown into the drawing room, and no doubt used the Scotchisms, "Carry any ladies that call upstairs." On the arrival of the first visitor Donald was eager to show his strict attention to the mistress's orders. Two ladies came together, and Donald seized one in his arms and then said to the other, "Bide ye there till I come for ye," and, in spite of her struggles and remonstrances, ushered the terrified visitor into his mistress's presence in this unwonted fashion.—Life.

A Substitute. According to a Cincinnati banker, who lives at the Plaza hotel in New York, an English guest at that hostelry was recently presented with a bunch of handsome roses. He took them to his apartments and found no suitable receptacle. So he placed them on the table and wrapped them in a wet newspaper while waiting for the boy to answer the bell. When the youngster came the Briton said, "Bring me—aw—a rose jar." The boy saluted and went away. After a lapse of time he returned. "Beg pardon, sir," said he, "but what was it you wanted?" He didn't understand. "I want a rose jar—aw"—said the Englishman very distinctly. "A rose jar—aw. Quite so." The boy went away again. In due time he returned bearing something in his hand. "The bartender," said he, "thinks mebbe you've got mixed on the names of these American drinks. He says he thinks you meant a mint julep."

Too Late. Sylvester Rawlings, the musical critic, became hungry the other day. And so he walked a long way to get to a restaurant in which he is acquainted. The waiter, Julius, is a particular friend of Mr. Rawlings. That gentleman has always cherished the belief that Julius has served him well. He thinks that from time to time Julius has won better food for him than is set forth upon the menu. "Bring me two or three fried eggs, Julius," Mr. Rawlings ordered. "Chess, sir, Mr. Rawlings," said Julius; "at once, sir."

And Julius hurried to the kitchen, walking in the duck footed haste of the perfect waiter. By and by he returned to Mr. Rawlings' side to place the silver and do other little chores about the table. Mr. Rawlings thought he would have a bit of fun with Julius. "Ah, Julius," said Mr. Rawlings—"by the way, Julius, see that those eggs are fresh, Julius?" "Too late, sir," said the grave Julius. "They're on the fire now."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.
