This Machine is guaranteed to give as good satisfaction as any hand powered machine on the market regardless of price. Delivered at your door for $2.27. Parcel postage prepaid.

This cut shows the washer complete ready to be attached to any tub or wash boiler. It is beyond all question the greatest success of any invention in the form of washing machines. With this washer the work is done by vacuum waterforce—the water and soap being forced through the goods by compressed air and suction.

This machine does the work in less time than the most expensive machine on the market—is easier operated and costs but one-fourth that of average machines. The Vacuum Washer can be attached to any tub or wash boiler in an instant—no screws to tighten—nothing to adjust—a child can operate it. The soap and water that does the work. It is simple in construction, but mighty in effect. Lace curtains or the most delicate fabrics can be cleaned without the slightest damage, and this is absolutely the only process by which bed-quilts can be washed without wadding the batting or breaking the stitches.

The plunger can easily be detached from lever and used in a pail or other small vessel for washing solid articles. The entire weight of the washer is four pounds, and it can be easily folded up and put out of the way when not in use.

HERE IT IS NOW, $2.27 FOR THE RAPID VACUUM WASHER AND TRI-WEEKLY ONE YEAR As a cash order from you. GROTESQUE CUSTOMS.

Slit Noses, Tattooed Bodies and Distended Ears in Abyssinia.

The people of the Gemira district of Abyssinia and some of their curious customs have been described by Mr. George Montandon in the Geographical Journal:

"As with all primitive peoples, the Gemira have customs peculiar to themselves, which are displayed in external traits, of which the principal are as follows: Every infant suffers vertical incision on the root of the nose. The men bear on the forehead a broad tumor lined with vertical furrows, due to the fact that when a relative dies they strike their forehead with the blade of their lance.

"A large number both of men and women have their chests and backs covered with tattoo marks, formed of simple cicatrices produced by punctures or cuts. The usual device is a triangle. The hair is cut in a singular manner. The head is divided into compartments and displays varying designs from the different lengths of hair in the several compartments.

"Among the ornaments worn, those on the ear attract the most attention. They are either pendants, of which some have the form of a double spiral and are identical with those met with in the lake stations of the bronze age, or take the form of plates of ivory, disks of wood or plugs of dried grass inserted into the lobe of the ear, which is distended to its utmost capacity by months or years of preparation. A Gemira's requirements in the matter of clothing are strictly limited, but he never goes quite naked.

"The huts are very small, and their steeply sloping roofs terminate in a sharp point. Their inmates sometimes paint on their huts, by means of colored earths, the figure which seems to be their favorite if not exclusive design—the triangle. The Gemira are pagans. They appear to believe in a divinity inhabiting the sky, not to be identified with the Wak of the Galla, but also in secondary genii dwelling on the earth."

Pepper in Olden Times.

During the middle ages in Europe pepper was the most esteemed and important of all the spices. Genoa, Venice and other commercial cities of central Europe were indebted to their traffic in pepper for a large part of their wealth. Its importance as a means of promoting commercial activity and civilization during the middle ages can hardly be overrated. Tribute was levied in pepper, and donations were made in this spice, which was frequently also used as a medium of exchange in place of money. When the imperial city of Rome was besieged by Alaric, the king of the Goths, in 408 A. D., the ransom demanded included 5,000 pounds of gold, 30,000 pounds of silver and 3,000 pounds of pepper, illustrating the importance of this spice at that time.

Appreciating Wagner.

"The Ring of the Nibelungen" was first produced in London under the special patronage of King Edward VII. when he was Prince of Wales. He loyally remained in his box from beginning to end, although he confessed afterward that it was the hardest work he ever did. When Wotan came on the darkened stage to an accompaniment of dis-cords the prince took a doze and an hour later was awakened by a double forte crash of the large orchestra. He fell asleep again, but in fifteen minutes was startled by another tremendous crash and found Wotan still singing against time. After the performance the prince told the manager in great confidence that if there was a Wotan in other Wagner operas he would withdraw his patronage.

Shadows of Sound.

As there are shadows that interfere with sight, so also there are "shadows" that interfere with hearing. This fact is well known by pilots. When, as in dense fogs, the boat is guided largely by the sense of hearing, there is a constant risk that these so called "shadows" may cut off the sound of the foghorns. In certain cases the sound waves seem to "jump" like bounding balls. At the distance of a mile the sound is heard perfectly, at two miles it may be impossible to hear it, while a mile farther on it may begin to be audible once more.—Exchange.

Misunderstood.

The vicar was sent for by a sick parishioner who was exceedingly deaf and who was by no means a regular churchgoer.

"What induced you to send for me?" asked the clergyman when he arrived.

"What does he say?" asked the old man, his hand to his ear.

"He says," explained his wife smoothly, "why the deuce did you send for him?"—London Globe.

SENATOR SMITH'S BILL.

Would Require Separate Pull-man Coaches for Negroes.

Washington, May 26:—Senator E D Smith, of South Carolina, today introduced a bill providing that transportation companies operating Pull-man or other sleeping cars through one or more States having laws requiring separate coaches or compartments for the races, shall provide separate and distinct accommodations for the conveyance of white and colored passengers in transit through said States, such accommodations to be equal as to comfort. The bill carries a penalty of $500 for each and every violation of its terms.

"It Couldn't Be Done."

Why not vary the usual order of our page this week by including a bit of verse? At the Richmond Farmers' conference on co-operation, one of the most popular speakers was Mr J C Caldwell of Minnesota, who told how a number of co-operation enterprises had succeeded in his community despite the great difficulties encountered. In every attempt at co-operation, he declared, we must face the criticisms of people who say "it can't be done." He then quoted a ringing "poetry piece" which made such a hit that he was overwhelmed with requests for copies of it. The Progressive Farmer representative there wants us to pass it on—and we are mighty glad to commend it as just as good co-operative doctrine as you will come across:

"Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied,
That 'maybe it couldn't,' but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That 'couldn't be done'—and he did it!
"Somebody scoffed: 'Oh, you'll never do that—
At least, no one ever has done it.'
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it.
With a lift of his chin, and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That 'couldn't be done'—and he did it!

"There are thousands to tell you it cannot be done,
There are thousands to prophesy failure;
There are thousands to point out to you one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That 'cannot be done'—and you'll do it."

Old Dr S C Armstrong used to say that "doing what can't be done is the glory of living." It is going to take this sort of spirit to make a success of co-operation in many parts of the South. Don't rush into a thing you are not willing to fight for till the bitter end, but if the plan has been worked out elsewhere, under like conditions as your own, it will take nothing but the spirit of Mr Caldwell's poem to make it a success in your town.—The Progressive Farmer.

"A Voter" Wants Information.

Editor County Record:—

Please let us know if it is the duty of the rural policemen to ride around the hands of these big saw-mill men and see if anybody is cutting the timber. It looks to us that these people have been favored long enough. They take a lease and about every five years go and cut all the timber off it and the owner is paying taxes on it all the time, and he gets only the little bit of money the mill king gives him the first time, when he promised to cut the timber and give him the lease back in two or three years.

If the owner of the land says anything the "king" will have his lawyer write him a letter and scare him into shutting his mouth.

Please, Mr Editor, let us know if there is no help for us poor people after we once get into the hands of these kings, who have grown rich on other people. They don't pay much taxes, and yet they try to run the whole government. Some of them even try to run the church and pray in public when they ought to be on the chaingang for life.
