The old man is as gray as a mill-rat but as spry as a mouse, although he has passed his 80th birthday. He is here in the interest of his church, a Mission Baptist church near Sumter, and will ask contributions. The old negro says he was a cook and body guard of General Lee during the war between the States.

For the convenience of the residents in North Kingstree in case fire breaks out in that section of town, Dr C D Jacobs has given the fire department permission to put a reel house on his lot where a reel truck with hose will be kept for use in case of fire. There will probably be another reel stationed on the east side of town for use in that section. If fire should break out in these sections residents will have hose convenient and can turn on the water much more quickly than if the hose were all located at the town hall.
