Swift's name on your fertilizer package is crop assurance. So many Swift customers insist they get 15 to 50 pounds more lint cotton per acre than from the next best brand. Fifteen pounds more cotton per acre equals $9.00 per ton more profit from the fertilizer used. This is the way it figures out:

15 pounds more cotton per acre at 12c equals $1.80, the extra profit per acre. One ton of fertilizer covers five acres which equals $9.00 more profit per ton. In other words, Swift's Fertilizer is worth $9.00 more per ton than the next best brand. Figure it out yourself. Insist on getting Swift's Red Steer Animal Ammoniated Fertilizers from your dealer and secure the most net profit.

Columbia College News.

Columbia, February 21:—Arbor Day was observed at the college on Friday, February 18. The students, each class in its colors, marched and wound in beautiful drills over the campus, and grouped in classes about places where trees were to be planted. Each class planted a tree with beautiful ceremony. Class songs, yells, and an appropriate address by a representative of each group made up the programme for the setting of the trees. Again as a student body the gay and frolicsome girls sang college songs and gave lusty yells for the college and those most interested in the observance of the day.

This exercise initiated the work planned and undertaken by the Columbia College club to beautify the campus. Mr Baldwin, the landscape gardener, has been employed and an elaborate and attractive plan is to be carried out to make the institution's surroundings more beautiful.

The jubilee celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Y W C A was observed at Columbia college on Saturday evening, February 12, by a joint meeting of the associations of Chicora and Columbia colleges. The log fire programme was followed. The Columbia college girls rejoiced in the opportunity to entertain their sisters of Chicora and mingle with them in a social and religious spirit.

The pedagogy class of the University of South Carolina was entertained by the pedagogy class of Columbia college on Friday evening, February 18. J L E.

S. C. LEGISLATURE HAS ADJOURNED.

A SESSION FRUITFUL IN GOOD WORKS--SOME OF THE THINGS ACCOMPLISHED BY THAT BODY.

At 5:30 o'clock Sunday morning, February 20, 1916, the second annual session of the present General Assembly of South Carolina came to a close, and the sound of the gavels of the presiding officers of the two legislative branches was silenced by the 40-day time limit until 1917, when it will be heard again, calling the old and new representatives of the people of the State to order to enact new laws and repeal or change old and imperfect measures as the interests of the sovereign people may best be served.

The forty-day session that ended Sunday morning was full of interest from start to finish, inasmuch as many new and important measures had to be considered and finally enacted into laws. Among the most important of these were those recommended by Governor Manning and known as Administration bills. All these acts are along lines of progressive legislation and are numbered among the constructive measures which have become law under the present Executive. They are: The State law of conciliation; teaching agriculture in the public schools in rural districts; raising the child labor age limit from 12 to 14 years; the Torrens system of land registration, and amendments to the tax commission providing for a State board of review and perfecting the measure so as to secure an equitable and just assessment of taxes.

One other measure close to the Governor's heart and urged by him in his message to the General Assembly was the rural credits bill. This, however, after much consideration, resulted in the passage of a concurrent resolution providing for a Legislative committee to investigate the subject more thoroughly, report its findings and make such recommendations as it may deem advisable to the General Assembly in 1917.

Apparently both branches of the General Assembly were actuated throughout the session by a desire to pass only such measures as were necessary and of a constructive nature, at the same time displaying an unalterable disposition to keep appropriations within a fixed or limited sum. In these aims they succeeded well and as a result the State tax levy has been reduced one-half mill from last year.

Other measures of far-reaching importance enacted during the closing hours of the session were that driving the Southeastern Tariff association out of the State; the reenactment of the prohibition referendum; a bill reducing the quantity of whiskey an individual may order from one gallon to two quarts per month, and the passage of the Liles bill providing a punishment for blind tigers and the illicit trafficking in liquor. These measures are now on the statute books and are applicable throughout the State. They are paramount among the legislative enactments during the recent session, although other important measures of general interest were passed.

Charleston Buys Horses Here.

Two Kentucky thoroughbreds and a Kentucky-raised horse were bought by Chief Black for the police department as the result of a visit by him to Kingstree Saturday afternoon. The horses were sold by J M Truluck and arrived in Charleston yesterday afternoon.

Chief Black rode each of the three horses yesterday and stated last night that he was perfectly satisfied with them. Other officers who looked the horses over yesterday stated that they were as fine animals as have ever been in local police service.

One of the horses has been named Danny and will be used by Chief Black. He stands sixteen and a half hands high and appears to be an excellent animal. The other two will be used by sergeants for their rounds. —News and Courier of Monday.
