Quick Cold Relief

is usually found through the prompt administration of a mildly laxative, dispersive tonic—one that will scatter the inflammation, remove the waste, and help Nature to build up resistance.
Peruna is That Tonic.
Its action is prompt, usually very effective, and its use is without harmful effects. Every household should keep it at hand for this purpose, and every catarrhal sufferer should regularly use this reliable remedy.
The tablet form will be found very convenient. A tablet or two at the very beginning of a cold will frequently prevent its development, and these tablets may be taken regularly with beneficial results.

Many prefer the liquid form which for nearly half a century has been the reliance of the American Home.
Both are good. Your druggist can supply you.

Profitable Surprise.
A Charleston grocer was visited recently by his brother from the Golden West. The brother asked for $100 to help him get back home, he said. The two went to a bank, where the money was drawn from the only moderately well to do Charleston brother's account. A few minutes later, on some excuse, the visiting relative returned to the bank alone, then rejoined his brother and soon after left for home with his family. A bank official the next day asked the Charlestonian if he had looked at his bank balance recently. He then looked and found the balance $5,000 larger than he thought, as his brother had quietly deposited that amount to his credit as a token of love and affection.

MISTAKEN FOR A STUMP.

A Hunting Adventure Which Had a Curious Ending.
I was once teaching school, writes a correspondent, in a backwoods region, and one afternoon in the hunting season I made my way to a small valley down which ran a well beaten deer trail.
I took my post on a small hill that commanded a good view of the valley. In front of me and about twelve feet distant was a large pine tree. Behind me was an old stump. As the evening was cool, I wore a gray sweater, and my hat was also gray.
After waiting for nearly an hour I noticed a movement in a small clump of bushes to my right. Then the horns and head of a large buck appeared, but he drew back before I had a chance to fire. With rifle cocked and finger on the trigger, I crouched, waiting for him to show himself again.
A squirrel chattered sharply from the stump behind. Then he landed squarely on the top of my head, from which he sprang to the tree. Immediately after I was thrown violently forward on my face by some heavy object that descended with great force on my back. The blow almost drove the breath from my body. My rifle was discharged as I fell.
Very much surprised and considerably alarmed, I scrambled to my feet. Recovering my rifle, I looked about for my assailant, but nothing living was in sight. I peered behind stumps and fallen logs, more mystified every moment. No owl swooping down upon the squirrel could have inflicted such a blow; neither had any limb fallen from the tree. I looked up among the thick foliage, but there was nothing to be seen. I walked round to the other side of the tree. On a large bough, but well hidden, I discerned a dim, gray shape. It was a full grown lynx. I brought him down by a well directed shot.
Now I understood the situation. Near the stump on which the squirrel had been sitting lay a large log. Behind this the lynx had crept on his prey. In escaping the little animal had leaped to my head and thence to the tree. His enemy had followed him, and he must have been mightily surprised at landing on a man and also by the report of my rifle.
Naturally I saw nothing more of the deer, but was richer by a fine lynx skin and a most uncommon experience.—Youth's Companion.
Cactus is Mexican's Watermelon.
The nopal cactus bears the tuna of the Mexicans and the prickly pear of the Americans. The tree is composed of a series of oval pads. As one of these pads hardens it becomes a part of the tree instead of remaining its foliage and fruit. The great pad produces a fruit about the size of a duck egg, covered with fine prickles, as full of seeds as the ordinary fig. It is always cool when plucked. The natives subsist almost entirely on it when they can get it. It means as much to the Mexican ninos as Georgia watermelon to the American picanninies.—National Geographic Magazine.
Mourning Rings.
In the seventeenth century a somewhat morbid taste in rings was evinced by the custom of wearing memorial or mourning rings bearing the name and date of the death of the departed. These were often of elaborate design, enameled in black and white, and a pleasantly suggestive ring of this type at one time very popular was formed of two skeletons bent along the hoop and holding a coffin on which the name and date were engraved.
Mutual Concession.
Minds the most congenial and seemingly formed to coalesce in the sweetest union may sometimes by missing the precise moment of explanation after a slight misunderstanding separate forever. Let us learn a lesson from this undeniable fact which may be useful to the proudest heart and the most delicate sensibility—there is no pride so high nor delicacy so refined as to be above the aid of mutual concession.
Beauty.
There is beauty of manner, of achievement, of reputation, of character. Any one of these outweighs beauty of person. Cultivate most of the kind that lasts the longest. It is not the first milepost, but the last, that tells the story; not the outward bound steed, but the one in the home stretch, that we hail as victor.—Frances E. Willard.
Saving the Capital.
Husband—I wish you'd stop this everlasting cackling about my expenditure.
Wife—No, I shan't. Cackling saved the capital of Rome, and I'm going to see if I can't save your capital that way.—Stray Stories.
