

THE GUINEA FOWL.

Demand for These Birds Shows Steady Increase in Cities.

The great majority of guinea fowls are raised in small flocks of from 10 to 25 upon farms in the middle west and in the south, but a few of the large poultry raisers, particularly those who are in within easy reach of the large eastern markets, make a practice of raising a hundred or so guineas each year. Many farmers keep a pair or a trio of guineas more as a novelty than for profit, and from these a small flock is raised.

The guinea fowl doubtless would be more popular on farms were it not for its harsh and, at times, seemingly never-ending cry, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. However, some people look on this cry as an argument in the guinea's favor, as it gives warning of marauders in the poultry yard. Similarly, their pugnacious disposition while sometimes causing disturbances among the other poultry also make them show fight against hawks and other common enemies, so that guineas sometimes are kept as guards over the poultry yard. Often a few guineas are raised with a flock of turkeys and allowed to roost in the same tree, where they can give warning if any theft is attempted during the night.

The value of the guinea fowl as a substitute for game birds such as grouse, partridge, quail and pheasant is becoming more and more recognized by those who are fond of this class of meat and the demand for these fowls is increasing steadily. Many hotels and restaurants in the large cities are eager to secure prime young guineas and often they are served at banquets and club dinners as a special delicacy. When well cooked guineas are attractive in appearance, although darker than common fowls and the flesh of young birds is tender and of especially fine flavor, resembling that of wild game. Like all other fowl, old guineas are very likely to be tough and rather dry.

FINE WOOD - WORKING
Shows in Brunswick Cabinets

While most people buy the Brunswick because of its superior tone and its ability to play all records at their best, no one overlooks the beautiful cabinet work and finish. In this particular, it is natural that the Brunswick should be supreme, for the House of Brunswick has been noted for nearly a century for its craftsmanship in wood. Brunswick makes its own cabinets—they are not bought outside. The Brunswick is built as a 100 per cent unit. So there is uniformity. Brunswick controls the entire process and every quality.

Hitherto Lost Tones Now Restored

The Brunswick Method of reproduction is a many-year development. It brings advancements when most people thought phonographs had reached their limit. First it brought the Ultona, the first in-built all-record reproducer. This great invention permits you to play every make of record on the Brunswick. No attachments are necessary. At a turn of the hand the Ultona presents the right needle, the correct diaphragm. The result is playing such as you never heard before. This reproducer transmits the tone to the Brunswick Tone Amplifier, another new-day advancement. The old way was to have a cast-metal throat between the reproducer and the amplifier. But not so in the Brunswick. In this finer instrument the amplifier is entirely of wood, like a violin, and tone waves can expand properly. Every acoustic law is observed.

HEAR, THEN COMPARE

The way to fully appreciate the superiority of the Brunswick is to hear it, then make comparison. Your ear will quickly decide in favor of the Brunswick. All the hitherto lost tones are restored. Metallic sounds are absent. There is richness, fullness, completeness. You'll appreciate how far in advance the Brunswick is; you'll admire its superior tone. The proof of the pudding is—Hearing. All we ask you to do is to investigate the Brunswick with your own ears.
