Many of them are anxious to leave an employment where ability and experience, with long and faithful service are no security against dismissal. It is safe to say, there are now ten advocates for civil service reform among government clerks, where there was only one before the election. Those who really wish to place the civil service beyond the mutations and out of the mud of politics, will not now be opposed by a majority of office holders.

I do not mean to say that all Republicans of the institution of these measures of Governor Jerome's defeat, but the bere are in despair; they are only alarmed, are a sufficient cause for the outherst of rest of the Republican State ticket is as they have not been since the morning after the Presidential election in 1876. There has, of course, been a large increase of avowed Democrats in and around the city; and in one year from this date, there will doubtless be witnessed a repetition of the unseemly scramble for the few offices at the disposal of the House, which was seen in 1874 when Mr. Kerr was elected Speaker. The contest for the Speakership and other offices of the House will be waged during the present session. Ex-Speaker Randill will have a strong following, while Springer of Ill., Carlisle and Blackburn of Ky., S. S.
