The day is dark-the clouds hang low-A strange funereal silence reigns, Save the hoarse croaking of the crow

That on his lustier fellow gains. wander in the fields alone. 'Tis peace to hear the soughing pines And the sad minor undertone That runs along the sedgy lines.

And thus by mystic silence zoned Where none may hear outspoken care, Tis peace to hear one's own voice toned Upon the sombre, lonesome air.

If my heart pain me, or the gall Of bitterness rise in my soul, I brood not on my pangs and all The ills that I cannot control.

Yet have done so-O have arrayed Hot curses 'gainst the ruling stars, Then compassed, foiled and forced, have frayed My very life against the bars.

And in captivity avow The impotence of wrath and tears.

ROLAND AND DIANA. A wit among the students of the Rochester Theological Seminary has contrived the following love tale, the chief interest of which will be found to lie in the assemblage of words liable to be mispronounced. Worcester's Dictionary is the standard, the pronunciation first given in that volume being always the one to decide. Let our readers try this puzzle | ral passenger agent of the Charlotte, Roland and Diana were lovers. Diana was ephemeral but comely, hypochondriacal but not lugubrious, didactic but not dishonest, nor given to ribald or truculent grimaces. Her pedal extremities were perhaps a trifle too large for a playing organ pedals successfully, but her heart was not at all adamantine, and her address was peremptory without being diffuse. On the whole she might well become the inamorata of one retired squalor and clangor, the dissonance and contumely, of a great metropolis.

Roland, on the other hand, was of a was served in elegant style and was the one goes for me I've got a lot of pepper saturnine countenance, at once splenetic occasion of much genuine rejoicing, the to throw in his eyes." and combative in disposition, so that his wassails and orgies were almost maniacal in their details. He was a telegrapher by profession, having received a diploma from Caius College, but aggrandized his stipend by dabbling in philology, orthoppy and zoology during his leisure hours, so that he was accused of fetichism and tergiversation by his

Still his acumen and prescience were such that only a misogynist would discern that he was an aspirant for the gallows. His acetic, rather than ascetic, nature apparently inclined him to visit a chemical laboratory, well filled with apparatus, to which he had access, whence he often returned with globules of iodine and albumen on his caoutchouc shoes, which subjected him to the risk of numerous altercations with his landlady, a virago and pythoness in one, and with the servant her, accessory or ally.

Roland had, however, become acclimated to his place, received everything with equability, reclined upon the divan while he contemplated the elysium where Diana dwelt, and addressed donative distichs to her in the subsidence of the

There was a certain diocesan who endeavored to dispossess Roland in the affections of Diana, but he was enervated by bronchitis, laryngitis and diphtheria, which on their subsidence left his carotid artery in an apparently lethargic condition. He had sent Diana a ring set with onyx, a chalcedonic variety of stone, and once hung a placard where he knew she would see it from her casement, but she steadily rejected his overtures, and ogled him as if he were a dromedary. The diocesan betook himself to absolutory prayers, but continued his digressions and inquiries. Roland became cognizant of his amour and armed with a withe inveigled him into a kind of assignation beneath a jasmine, where he inveighed against this "Gay Lothario," who defended himself earn the interest on its bonded debt with a falchion until Roland disarmed him, houghing his palirey withal. After the joust the prebendary abjectly apolocized, albeit in a scarcely respirable condition, then hastened to the pharmacutic's aerie for copaiba, morphine and quinine, and was not seen again until the next

Roland returned on Thanksgiving day, took an inventory of his possessions, which consisted of a large quantity of almond cement, a package of envelopes, a dish of anchovy sauce, a tame falcon, a book on acoustics, a miniature of a mirage, a treatise on the epizootic, a stomacher lined with sarcenet, a cerement of sepulture, a adaver and a are you, my son?

were performed, and Diana became passenger. enceforth his faithful coadintant and 'Fine boy,' smiled the old man, as Let every man sweep the snow from
