The Story of a Masterpiece.

By HENRY JAMES, Jr.

IN TWO PARTS.—PART I. (Copyrighted.)

Baxter had still a week at his disposal, and Marian made it a very happy one. He was tired; he had come to a halt, and there was no interruption to their being together.

It was their misfortune, both to be poor. He was very poor, and she was very poor. He had no money, and she had no money.

He had received, while absent, five little letters from Marian, full of affection. The number was small, but the young man had been very busy.

Marian herself was perfectly at ease. She had not retained her equanimity—her philosophy, one might almost call it—during that painful interval to go and lose it.

"You know, at least, whether Mr. Young has been in your drawing room?" "Yes, I have seen him."

"What a lovely girl!" "Yes, she is a very nice girl. I like her very much."

"I don't say that," said Mr. Denbigh, sagaciously. "She doesn't care for good things alone. She wants talent, and all the rest of it."

impression of heartlessness and shallowness, which in that particular quarter, at least, was destined to be forever fatal to her claims to real weight and worth.

He immediately left Paris and went down into Spain, where he remained all the opening of the summer. In the month of May, Mrs. Denbigh and her protegee went to England, where the former, through her husband, possessed a number of connections, and was very much sought after.

There had been a great deal of talk about the young man's return to his home, and he was very much sought after. He had received, while absent, five little letters from Marian, full of affection.

Our State Contemporaries.

A Bipartisan Question.

We would like to know by what power or authority the Agricultural Board appropriated $1,000 to constitute S. C. a member of the Southern Central Committee of Immigration located at New York?

Our observation of Captain B. R. Tillman will warrant us in judging him to be a practical reformer. He possesses earnestness, but is deficient in judgment.

He is ill-tempered and irascible, and deals largely in bold assertions without the armament of facts necessary to support and sustain them.

The happiest and most independent life is that of the farmer who keeps out of debt and out of politics, and yet there are many who neglect the farm for politics, and this necessitates debt.

The Orangeburg correspondence to the News and Courier contains the following reference to the Atlantic Coast Line extension:

"To speak more plainly, the business men here look forward with some degree of confidence to the completion, at no distant day of the Atlantic Coast Line extension from Sumter by way of Orangeburg, across the Edisto and on to Augusta or some other favorable point so as to secure a shorter route to Florida and the Southwest."

The announcement that the South Carolina College has 25 'tax eaters' is an eye opener. Let the Press and Banner open its batteries on this outrage to pass that way, but both President Bridges and Chief Engineer Gardner have written to the authorities there that they think the elevation at St. Matthew's too high to enable them to cross the Edisto, as they are restricted to thirty feet grade to the mile.

THE MURDER TRIAL.

The trial of P. G. Bowman and Walter I. Harby under the indictment for the murder of T. J. Jones was taken up by the Court on Thursday.

Without casting any reflections on our own hotels, which are as well kept as those of similar grade in any other city, it would be well if Columbia could also have a magnificent palace so to ensure every comfort to visitors.

The examination of witnesses which was concluded about 7 o'clock Saturday evening. The State was represented by Attorney General Earle and Solicitor Gilliland, and the defense by Messrs. Moises & Lee and Robert Aldrich of Barrowell and W. C. Bennett of Abbeville.

What the Organization Proposes to Do—A Delegate from Headquarters. (From the Atlanta Journal.) Hon. R. H. Johnson President of the Farmers' Alliance of this State, is in the city to-day.

"We now have forty thousand members in Georgia, and when you remember that we began to organize about the first of March, this shows a remarkable growth, and before the present year expires we will have in Georgia one hundred thousand members."

"We are desirous of knowing, Mr. Jackson, what you are teaching your members in the way of improvement?" "Well," said he, "first, we are using our utmost influence to get our farmers (members of the order) to diversify their crops, and as a result, in all sections where we have a foothold, there is at least one-third more corn planted than last year, and in a few years we hope to have our members, each and every one, self-sustaining."

"I am of opinion," said Mr. Jackson, "that we are on the eve of a commercial revolution. The farmer has been plucked so often and for so long a time that he is going to rise up in self-defense and make a revolution and his influence will be felt all over the country."

The Newberry Observer offers to publish the views of any candidate for the Legislature. It will be a sign of the times when the views of candidates should be required of them, fair and square, before any one of them will be considered by the people.

The Press Association. The State Press Association will meet in Greenville on Tuesday, 24th of July. Major John W. Holmes, of the Barrowell People, will deliver the annual address.
