We are in a position to explain, and in doing so, we can't deem that we are violating any confidence. Mr. Perry, after consultation with those in authority with the Alliance people, has cast his mantle upon the shoulders of Mr. Bell, of his own County, and bopes, through his retirement to his farm, to supply what the farmers have wanted-a leader, who, like Cincinnatus, can quit the plowshares for the reins of government.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1, 1889. This has been a great week for our Catholic fellow citizens. First they celebrated their centennial in Baltimore. Then on Wednesday they dedicated their big University here. The dedication ceremonies were attended by the President, Vice-President, the entire cabinet, several justices of the Supreme Court and quite a rumber of Senators and Representatives. At the banquet which followed the ceremonies Secretary Blaine responded to the toast "Our Country and our President," in a manner that has won the commendation of everybody. The three America's Congress is back in Washington, but owing to the fatigue of its members, regular sittings will not begin until next week. The delegates are enthusiastic over what they saw during their forty days trip around the country. Mr. Wanamaker does not like the name of

'Ananias' which Senator Hampton's stinging letter has hung to his coat tail for the rest of his life.

In view of the fact that Vice-President Morton's big apartment house in this city has become, or hids fair to become a National issue, your correspondent deems it only fair festly the best advertising medium in to say there is no bar-room, as such a place is commonly known, in the building, but in one end of the cafe there are a number of tables at which you can sit and be served with all the liquor you care to pay for. Senator Sherman has returned from Ohio in the best of humors. He finds it impossible to hide his elation over Foraker's defeat. We were defeated, as everybody knows, but the republican party has been defeated in the White House, presumably to congratulate Mr. Harrison on the summary removal of what looked at one time like a dangerous Harrison chuckled as he thought that the Ohio election removed two rivals instead of one as Mr. Sherman thinks.
