The Adrichman and Southron. WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24. IN SIGHT OF THE CRYSTAL SEA.

I sat alone with life's memories, In sight of the crystal sea, And I saw the throne of the star-crowned

With never a crown for me;
And then the voice of the Judge said, Come,
Of the Judge on the great white throne;
And I saw the star-crowned take their seats, But none I could call my own. I thought me then of my childhood days,

The prayer at my mother's knee; Of the counsels grave that my father gave The wrath I was warned to flee; I said, Is it then too late, too late, Shut without must I stand for aye? And the Judge, will He say, I know you no

Howe'er I may knock and pray? I thought, I thought of the days of God
I had wasted in folly and sin— Of the times I had mocked when the Sa viour knocked And I would not let Him in; I thought, I thought of the vows I had made When I lay at death's dark door— Would He spare my life, I'd give up the strife, And serve Him forever more.

I heard a voice like the voice of God: Remember, remember, my son! Remember thy ways in the former days The crowns that thou mightst have won I thought, I thought, and my thoughts ran on, Like the tide of a sunless sea— Am I living or dead? to myself I said, An end is there ne'er to be?

It seems as though I woke from a dream How sweet was the light of day! Melodious sounded the Sabbath bells From towers that were far away. I then became as a little child, And I wept and wept af: sh'!
For the Lord had taken my heart of stone.
And given a heart of flesh.

Still oft I sit with life's memories, And I think of the crystal sea; And I see the thrones of the star-crowned

And know there's a crown for me. And when the voice of the Judge says snow, mid the thrones of the star crowned ones, There's one I shall call my own.
