CHIEF JUSTICE SIMPSON.

Chief Justice William D. Simpson died at his home in Columbia, on the corner of Main and Semter streets, at 7 o'clock last Friday morning. Although It has been known by many of the bar and his Mends that Judge Simpson's health had been indifferent for some time past, yet the announcement of his death, consequent upon only two days liness, came with a shock to all.

In his death the State has lost an eminent jurist and the bac a shining example of meral and professional

After leaving the South Carolina College he took a course at the Harvard law school, and was one of that fortunate band of students who attended the law lectures scholar, Joseph Story. He was admitted to the bar in 1846, and commesced practice in partnership with the late Henry C. Young, a leading lawyer at Leurens. He made his first appearance in public life, in the House, as a representative, in which capacity he rendered his native county distinguished service for several terms.

At the commencement of the war b went into the army as a volunteer aide to General M. L. Bonham, and was one of his staff at the battle of Manassas. In July, 1861, he was elected Major of Lieutenant Colonelcy of the regiment. Me then served with General Gregg's cogment in the battles around Rich mond. He was present at the battle of Federicksburg, and served with coolness and distinguished gallantry through all of the battles in which he was engaged After the battle of Federicksburg, he resigned his commission in the army to take his seat in the Confederate Congrees. In 1868 he was elected to the United States Congress over R. J Wallace, the Republican Candidate, by a majority of 4,291 votes, but on account of political disabilities was not allowed to take his seat.

It was in the great revolution of 1876 that the element of his mind and manhood were recognized, and he was elected to the office of Lieutenant Governor on the Hampton ticket. He was re-elected in 1878, and at that time a man understood that he was to fill the gubernatural chair on the election of Hampton to the Senate.

He was elected to the Chief Justiceship in 1879, and has held that position ever since. His term would have expered on the 30th July, 1892. Oh that he could have been spared a little longer. But the ways of Providence are not our ways, and teach us "What shadows we are, what shadows we

It is a sad but grateful privilege briefly to record here some of the events in the useful life of this great and good wan. A life characterized by individuality of thought and action, and free from anything mean or selfish. PRINGLE PUNISHED. A great deal has been written about the discharge of Mr. Butler, from his place as one of the engrossing clerks, by Attorney General Pope, on account of his political opinions, and the consequent prosecution of the Attorney General therefor in the Court of Trial Justice Pringle T. Youmans, of Columbia. There is a statute, Section 2.552, which makes it an indictable offense, for such reason, "To discharge such citizen from employment or occupation." Any person guilty of such offense shall be "fined not less than fifty or more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not less than three months, or more than one year, or both, at the discretion of the Court." Upon the affidavit of Mr. Gonzales, Justice Youmans issued the warrant for the arrest of the Attorney General. but after the preliminary examination. summarily dismissed the case. The press has been severely criticising Mr. Youmans' action in the matter from beginning to end-especially his rulings upon the law in the trial, and in allowing entirely irrelevant testimony to be admitted. Mr. Youmans came out in a card about ten days ago saying he would "stoop" to answer the insinuations, charges, etc , in a short time.
