The Room in the South for More Farmers.

The Atlanta Constitution thinks there is room in Georgia for 1,000 more farmers in every county in the State, or 146,000 in the entire State, and that without over crowding. There is no doubt of it. What is more, there is not only room but also the best of opportunity for an average of 1,000 or more farmers in every county in that part of the South east of the Mississippi river, a good living for all of them, and, if they are of the right sort, early competence. The lands of the South will produce the most profitable crops; there are plenty of available markets and transportation to these markets is efficient. The South has always been a section of large plantations, of cotton plantations, which compare in size and importance with the best of the bonanza farms of the West and the Northwest and which, as a rule, have yielded greater profits per acre of ground cultivated. But the South is really a country for the small farmer, for the man who will care well for a few acres, whether in cotton, corn, wheat or fruit or truck or some one of the crops which are only to be grown profitably in that portion of our country. The Southern farm of the future is to be from twenty to 250 acres, devoted to diversified farming. This kind of a farm, in the hands of a man who will study the soils, who will see that it is cultivated thoroughly and as it should be, yielding its two or three crops successively each year on each acre of land, will give the farmer the very best results to be earned anywhere in America. Whatever the soils of the particular section of the South in which a man may locate and whatever the particular crops which may be most advantageously grown there, the Southern farmer always has the advantage over his fellow farmer located in other portions of the Union of a more favorable climate, of a greater variety of crops from which to choose, of early production and of a larger number of markets in which to sell, and to these is added the marked advantage to the educated farmer of a larger number of the distinctly soil building crops which will keep up the land's fertility.

There are very few communities in the South in which the homeseeker looking for lands cannot find available locations of the best sort at prices much lower than prevail in any other farming sections of the country, new or old. In that larger region east of the Mississippi river reached by the lines of the Southern Railway and its affiliated roads are many millions acres of land, in the aggregate, which are to be had on easy terms and which present the very finest opportunities for either the general or special farmer. The average farmer of the North would be surprised at the price at which these lands can be obtained if he were to make a careful study of their character and their profit producing possibilities. They are only so low in price because there never has been in the South anything like an agricultural population sufficient to utilize them and because their value has never been understood in other sections of the country.—Southern Field.

His Threat to a Conductor.

Some time ago a man at Ypsilanti, Mich., became crazed on the subject of hypnotism and was sent on a Michigan Central train to an asylum. When the conductor asked for tickets the crazy man began telling of his hypnotic powers. "I'll hypnotize you," he said. "Fire away," replied the conductor. The man made several passes before the conductor's face. "Now you are hypnotized," he said. The conductor looked the part as best he could. "You're a conductor," went on the hypnotist. "That's right," replied his victim. "You're a good conductor," went on the hypnotist. "Right again," said the conductor. "You don't smoke, drink or swear at passengers. You are honest. You turn in all tickets and money you collect from passengers. In fact you do not steal a cent." "That's right," asserted the conductor. The hypnotist eyed him a moment, then said: "What an awful fix you'd be in if I left you in this condition!"—Kansas City Star.

Practical Politics.

A political office in a small town in Iowa was vacant. The office paid $250 a year, and there was keen competition for it. The Democratic candidate, Ezekiel Hicks, was a shrewd old fellow, and a neat campaign fund was turned over to him. To the astonishment of all, however, he was defeated. "I can't account for it," said one of the Democratic leaders gloomily. "With that money, we should have won. How did you lay it out, Ezekiel?" "Well," said Ezekiel, slowly pulling his whiskers, "yer see, that office only pays $250 a year salary, an' I didn't see no sense in payin' $900 out to get the office; so I bought me a little truck farm instead."—Lippincott's.

When the Judge Won Out.

Wilbur E. Williams, as speaker at the law enforcement convention, held here recently, told a story on a gas belt police judge in explaining how men in such a position had better be careful as to the company they keep. He said some gamblers, who were brought into this judges' court, were proven guilty. The judge frowned; the gamblers frowned and marched in funeral fashion out to pay their fines. They were "digging" when the judge passed them. He poked one of the men in the ribs. "Well, Bill," he said to the gambler, "this is not the first time I have dealt with you." "No, judge," smiled the gambler. "But it is the first time I ever came out of the game with your money," said the judge.—Indianapolis Star.

On the Limited.

The merciless heat made the passengers gasp as the limited ploughed its way steadily across the western plains. Dreary, monotonous, was the vista of sand and scrub which greeted the eyes of the wearied travelers. To add to their discomfort, above the muffled roar of the train arose the continuous wailing of a child. More than one man cursed softly and sought refuge in another car—all, as it happened, crowded. Finally a harsh-looking passenger spoke. "Why don't you keep that brat quiet?" he snapped. The mother, a forlorn-looking woman clad in rusty black, looked pathetically up at him. "I've been trying to," she faltered. "But you see, the heat and the long journey." A new expression stole over the harsh-looking passenger's face. "Give it to me," he said in a tone of marvellous gentleness; and the poor mother placed the fretful baby in his arms. Whereupon he threw the child out of the window. Sold again!—Lippincott's.

Kills Her Foe of 20 Years.

*"The most merciless enemy I had for 20 years," declares Mrs. James Duncan, of Haynesville, Me., "was dyspepsia. I suffered intensely after eating or drinking and could scarcely sleep. After many remedies had failed and several doctors gave me up, I tried Electric Bitters, which cured me completely. Now I can eat anything. I am 70 years old and am over-joyed to get my health and strength back again." For Indigestion, loss of appetite, kidney trouble, lame back, female complaints, its unequalled. NAVAL BASE AT PEARL HARBOR.

Fortifications in the Philippines to Be Minimized.

Washington, Nov. 11.—The recommendation of the joint army and navy board that Pearl Harbor, in the Hawaiian Islands, be made the great naval station in the Pacific, was approved today by President Taft.

In doing this it was decided that a temporary naval station only would be constructed at Olongapo, and that the proposed improvement of Manila harbor be abandoned. This will leave the protection of the Philippine Islands to the army.

The determination to minimize the fortifications in the Philippine Islands to make Pearl Harbor a great naval station was not, it was explained today, because of any intention to withdraw American control over the Philippines. It was done, it was said, purely for reasons of strategy.

For years a fierce controversy has been waged as to whether the principal fortification in the Philippines should be located at Olongapo or Cavite. The naval officers favored Olongapo and the army Manila Bay, on the ground that Olongapo could not be protected from land attacks.

The big floating dry dock, Dewey, is now at Olongapo, and under the present plan will be retained there. Such improvements as are made at this point, now estimated to cost between $200,000 and $300,000, will be with the idea of removing the Dewey to some other port in case of danger from attack.

Smallpox Case at Newberry.

Newberry, November 11.—A case of smallpox developed in one of the men who came here to join the Barkott Carnival Company. He had not been with the Carnival, but came here from Columbia. The board of health has taken charge of the case and every precaution is being taken, and there is not much probability of any spread of the disease.

Atlanta is to vote upon the question of a bond issue, and a committee of citizens is holding meetings in every ward. The money is needed for extending the water and sewer systems. The statement is made that these need improvement in order to promote immunity from possible epidemic in the hot weather. A bond issue of $3,000,000 is desired for these purposes and for the public schools, a hospital, and the construction of crematories. It does not appear in the published appeals to support the propositions why private enterprise may not be trusted to supply the crematories. But the advocates of the bond issue are showing themselves very much in earnest.
