

By LOUIS TRACY. Author of the "Piller of Light," 'The Wings of the Morning" and "The Captain of the Kansas."

Copyright, 1989, by Edward J. Clode

CHAPTER III. WHEREIN THE ANDROMEDA NEARS THE END OF HER VOYAGE,

IVE bells, miss! It'll soon be daylight. If you wants to see the cross, now's your time!"
Iris had been called from dreamless sleep by a thundering rattat on her cabin door. In reply to her half awaked cry of "All right!" the hoarse voice of a sailor told her that the Southern Cross had just risen above the horison. She resolutely screwed her knuckles into her eyes and began to dress. In a few minutes she was on deck. A long coat, a tamo'-shanter and a pair of list slippers will go far in the way of costume at night in the tropics, and the Andromeda's seventeenth day at sea had brought the equator very near. At dinner on the previous evening-in honor of the owner's niece fashionable ours were observed for meals-Mr. Watts mentioned by chance that the cross had been very distinct during the middle watch, or, in other words, between midnight and 4 a. m. Iris at once expressed a wish to see it, and Captain Coke offered a suggestion.

"Mr. Hozier takes the middle watch tonight," said he. "We can ax 'im to send a man to pound on your door as soon as it rises. Then you must run up to the bridge, an' 'e'll tell you all

If Iris was conscious of a slight feeling of surprise she did not show it. Hitherto the burly skipper of the Anda had made it so clearly understood that none of the ship's company mave himself was to enjoy the society of Miss Iris Yorke that she had exchanged very few words with the one man whose manners and education obviously entitled him to meet her on an equal plane. Even at meals he was often absent. So Coke's complacency came now quite unexpectedly, but Iris was learning to school her tongue.

"Thank you very much," she said. "When shall I see him?"

"Oh, you needn't bother. I'll tell

She was somewhat disappointed at this. Hozier would be free for an hour efore he turned in, and they might have enjoyed a nice chat while he smoked on the poop. In her heart of hearts she was beginning to acknowledge that a voyage through summer seas or a cargo vessel, with no other society than that of unimaginative sailormen, savored of tedium, indeed almost of deadly monotony. Her rare meetings with Hozier marked bright spots in a dull round of hours. During their small intercourse she had discovared that he was well informed. They had hit upon a few kindred tastes in books and music. They even differed harply in their appreciation of favorte authors. And what could be more conducive to complete understanding than the attack and defense of the shrine of some tin god of literature?

While, therefore, it was strange that Captain Coke should actually propose a visit to the bridge at an unusual time-at a time, too, when Hozier would be on duty-it struck her as far more curious that he should endeavor to prevent an earlier meeting.

"I shall be delighted to come at any time. I have often read about the Southern Cross, yet three short weeks ago I little thought"-

"You reely didn't think about it at all," broke th Coke. "If you 'ad you'd ave known you couldn't cross the line without seein' it."

Here was another perplexing element in the skipper's conduct. That Iris was a stowaway was forgotten. She was treated with the attention and ceremony due to the owner's niece. Coke never lost an opportunity of dinning into the ears of Watts or Hozier or the steward or any members of the crew who were listening that Miss Yorke's presence in their midst was a preordained circumstance, a thing fully discussed and agreed on as between her uncle and himself, but carried out in an irregular manner owing to some girlish freak on her part. The portmanteau, with its change of raiment, brought convincing further proof, if that were needed. A keen, invigorating breeze swept the last mirage of sleep from the girl's brain as she flitted silently along the deck. A wondrous galaxy of stars blazed in the heavens. In that pellucid air the sky was a vivid ultramarine. The ship's track was marked by a trail of phosphorescent fire. Each revolution of the propeller drew from the ocean treasure house opulent globes of golden light that danced and sparkled in the tumbling waters. It was a night that pulsated with the romance testimony, and Iris' own words when discovered in the lazarette supplied and abandon of the south, a night when the heart might throb with unutterable longings and the blood tingle in the veins under the stress of an emotion at once passionate and mystic.

Iris, spurred on by no stronger impulse than that of the sightseer, though not wholly unaware of an element of adventurous shyness in her expectation of a tete-a-tete with a good looking young man of her own status, climbed to the bridge so speedily and noiselessly that Hozier did not know of her presence until he heard her dismayed cry:

"Is that the Southern Cross?" He turned quickly.

"You, Miss Yorke?" he exclaimed, while it perplexed. and not even her wonder at the insignificance of the stellar display of which she had heard so much could cloak the fact that Hozier was unprepared for her appearance.

"YOU, MISS YORKE?" HE EXCLAIMED.

"Of course it is I. Who else?" she asked. "Did not Captain Coke tell you to expect me?"

"How odd! That is what he arranged. A man came and rapped at my door."

"Pardon me one moment."

He leaned over the bridge and hailed the watch. The same hoarse voice that had roused Iris answered his questions, and in the faint light that came from the binnacle she caught a flicker of amusement on his face.

"Our excellent skipper's intentions have been defeated," he said. "He told one of the men to call him at seven bells, but not to wake you until the cross was visible. His orders have been obeyed quite literally. He will be summoned in another hour, and you have been dragged from bed to gaze at the false cross, which every foremast hand persists in regarding as the real article. The true cross, of which Alpha Crucis is the southern pole star, comes up over the horizon an hour after the false one."

"But Captain Coke said he would see you and warn you of my visit."

"I can only assure you that he did not. Perhaps he thought it unnecessary, meaning to be on deck himself." "Must I wait here a whole hour

Hozier laughed. It was amusing to find how Coke's marked effort to keep the girl and him apart had been defeated by a sailor's blunder.

"I hope the waiting will not weary you," he said. "It is a beautiful night." am glad of the accident that brought me on deck somewhat earlier than was necessary." she said. "You and I have not said much to each other since you routed me out of the lazarette, Mr. Hozier."

"Our friends at table are somewhatdifficult. If only you knew how I re-

"Oh, what of that? When I became a stowaway I fully expected to be treated as one. I suppose, though, that you have often asked yourself why I was guilty of such a mad trick."

"Not exactly mad, Miss Yorke, but needless, since Captain Coke partly expected to have your company."

"That is absurd. He had not the remotest notion"-

"Forgive me, but there you are wrong. He says that your uncle and he discussed the matter on the Sunday before we left Liverpool. His theory is rather borne out by the present state of the ship's larder. I assure you that few tramp steamers spread a table like the Andromeda's mess during this voyage."

Iris laughed with a spontaneous merriment that was rather astonishing in her own ears. "Being the owner's niece, I am well catered for?" she cried. "Something of the sort. It is only natural." "But I think I have read in the newspapers that when some unhappy creature is condemned to death by the law he is supplied with luxuries that would certainly be denied to any ordinary criminal?" Such doubtful clemency can hardly apply to you. Miss Yorke." "It might apply to the ship or to that human part of her that thinks and remembers and is capable of-of living evidence."

She paused, fearing lest, perhaps, she might have spoken too plainly. Coke's counter stroke in alluding to her dread of the proposed marriage was hidden from her ken. Hozier, of course, was thinking of nothing else. For the moment, then, they were at cross purposes.

"Things are not so bad as that," he said gently. "I hope I am not trespassing on forbidden ground, but it is only fair to tell you that the skipper was quite explicit up to a point. He said you were being forced into some matrimonial arrangement that was distasteful"-

"And, to escape from an undesirable suitor, I ran away?"

"Well, the story sounded all right." "Hid myself on my uncle's ship when I wished to avoid marrying the man of his choice?"

Hozier was not neglecting his work, but he did then take his eyes off the starlit sea for a few amazed seconds. There was no mistaking the scornful ring in the girl's words. He could see the deep color that flooded her cheeks. The glance that met his sparkled with an intensity of feeling that thrilled

"Please pardon me if the question hurts, but if that is not your motive and there never was any real notion of your coming on this trip why are you here?" he said.

"Because I am a foolish girl, I suppose-because I thought that my presence might interpose a serious olstacle between a criminal and the crime he had planned to commit. If one wants to avoid hateful people a change of climate is a most effectual means, and I had not the money for she answered. "But please don't be ordinary travel. Believe me, Mr. Hozier, I am not on board the Andromeda without good reason. I have often wished to have a talk with you. 1 think you are a man who would not able." betray a confidence. If you agree to help me, something may yet be done. At first I was sure that Captain Coke would abandon his wicked project as soon as he discovered that I knew what was in his mind. But now I am beginning to doubt. Each day brings us nearer South America, andand"-

She was breathless with excitement. She drew nearer to the silent and impassive man at her side, dropping her voice almost to a whisper. She caught his arm with an appealing hand.

"I am afraid that my presence will offer no hindrance to his scheme," she murmured. "I am terrified to say such a thing, but I am certain, quite certain, that the ship will be lost within the next few days."

Hozier, though incredulous, could not but realize that the girl was saying that which she honestly thought to be "Lost! Do you mean that she will be purposely thrown away?" he asked, and his own voice was not wholly under control, for he was called on to repress a sudden temptation to kiss away the tears that glistened in her brown eyes.

"Yes, that is what he said-on the rocks this side of Montevideo." "He said-who?"

"The-the captain." "To whom did he say it?"

"Oh, Mr. Hozier, do not ask that, but believe me and help me." "How?"

"I do not know. I am half distracted with thinking. What can we do? Captain Coke simply swept aside my first attempt to speak plainly to him. But-make no mistake-he knows that I heard his very words, and there is something in his manner, a curious sort of quiet confidence, that frightens

After that neither spoke during many minutes.

"That is a very serious thing you have told me, Miss Yorke," muttered Hozier at last. not without a backward glance at the sailor in the wheelhouse to assure himself that the man could not by any chance overhear their conversation.

"But it is true -dreadfully true," said Iris. clasping her hands together and resting them on the high railing of

"It is all the "BUT IT IS TRUEmore serious, DREADFULLY TRUE. inasmuch as SAID IRIS.

we are helpless," he went on. "Don't you see how impossible it is even to hint at it in any discussion with the man principally concerned? I want to say this, though—you are in no danger. There is no ship so safe as one that is picked out for willful destruction. Men will not sacrifice their own lives even to make good an insurance policy, and I suppose that is what is intended. So you can sleep sound of nights-at any rate until we near the coast of Brazil. I can only promise you if any watchfulness on my part can stop this piece of villainy- Hello, there! What's up? Why is the ship falling away from her course?"

The sudden change in his voice startled the girl so greatly that she uttered a slight shriek. It took her an appreciable time to understand that he was speaking to the man at the wheel. But the sailor knew what he meant.

"Something's gone wrong with the wheel, sir." he bawled. "I wasn't certain at first, so I tried to put her over a bit to s'uth'ard. Then she jammed for sure."

Hozier leaped to the telegraph and signaled "slow" to the engine room. Already the golden pathway behind the Andromeda had changed from a wavering yet generally straight line to a well defined curve. There was a hiss and snort of escaping steam as the sailor inside the charthouse endeavored to force the machinery into action.

"Steady, there!" bellowed Hozier. Wait until we have examined the gear boxes! There may be a kink in a chain!"

A loud order brought the watch scurrying along the deck. Some of the men ran to examine the bearings of the huge fan shaped casting that governed the movements of the rudder, while others began to tap the wooden shields which protected the steering rods and chains. In the midst of the hammering and excitement Captain Coke swung himself up to the bridge.

"Well, I'm blowed! You here?" he said, looking at Iris. "Wot is it now?" he asked, turning sharply to Hozier. "Wheel stuck again?"

"Yes, sir. Has it happened before?" "Well-er-not this trip. But it 'as 'appened. Just for a minnit I was mixin' it up with the night you nearly run down that bloomin' hooker off the Irish coast. Ah, there she goes! Everything O. K. now. W'en daylight comes we'll overhaul the fixin's. Nice thing if the wheel jammed just as we was crossin' the Recife!"

Hozier tried to ascertain from the watch if they had found the cause of the disturbance, but the men could only guess that a chance blow with an adz had straightened a kink in one of the casings. Coke treated the incident with nonchalance. "Thought you was to be called w'en the cross hove in sight, Miss Yorke?" he said abruptly.

"I am sorry to have to inform you that some people on board cannot distinguish between falsity and truth," angry with any of the men on my account. Mr. Hozier tells me they often confuse the false cross v th the real one, and the mistake has been enjoy-

"A reg'lar 'umbug, the Southern Cross," grunted Coke. "It ain't a patch on the bear.'

Coke grinned at his own pleasantry. To one of his hearers at least it seemed to be passing strange that he was in the steering gear as had manifested its existence a few minutes earlier.

CHAPTER IV.

SHELLED BY A MYSTERIOUS FOE ON SHORE OKE remained on the bridge until long after Iris had seen and to regard with awe. When shafts of white light began to taper pennon-like in the eastern sky the girl went back to her cabin. Contrary to Hozier's expectation, Coke did not attempt to draw of charts, made a slight alteration in the course and at 4 o'clock took charge of the bridge.

"Just 'ave a look around now while bone into a gear box. If the plankin' is badly worn anywhere, get the carpenter to see to it. I do 'ate to 'ave a feelin' that the wheel can let you down. S'pose we was makin' Bahia on the homeward run an' that 'appened! It 'ud be the end of the pore ole away!""

Hozier found a gnawed piece of ham bone lying in the exact position anticipated by Coke.

The carpenter busied himself with Andromeda revealed many gaps in her woodwork, but the escapade of an errant ham bone was utterly eclipsed by a new sensation. At daybreak one morning every drop of water in the denunciation. essel's tanks suddenly assumed a rich blood red tint. This unnerving the newspapers and taking up his discovery was made by the cook, who recommendations to the general aswas horrified to see a ruby stream sembly, South Carolina's new goverpouring into the earliest kettle. Thinking that an iron pipe had become oxidized with startling rapidity, he tried another tap. Finally there could be no blinking the fact that by some uncanny means the whole of the fresh if not the taste of a thin burgundy.

Coke was summoned hastily. Noblesse oblige, being captain, he valiantly essayed the task of sampling this strange beverage.

"It ain't p'ison." he announced, gaz- and enforcement of all laws. ing suspiciously at the little group of anxious faced men who awaited his the State and the United States. verdict. "It sartinly ain't p'ison, but it's wuss nor any teetotal brew I've tackled in all me born days. 'Ere, Watts, you know the tang of every kind o' likker-'ave a sup."

the look of it. First time I've ever ment by injunction vicious and deseen red ink on tap. For the rest of grading." this trip I stick to bottled beer or something with a label."

"It smells like an infusion of permanganate of potash," volunteered Ho-ed to be greatly annoyed. "Wot a pity it ain't an infusion of whisky an' potash!" and he glared vindictively at Watts. "Some ijjit 'as bin playin' a trick on us, that's wot it is-some blank soaker 'oo don't give a hooraw or registration of marriage. in hades for tea an' coffee an' cocoa, but wants a tonic. Stooard!"

"Yes, sir," said the mess room attend-

(To Be Continued.)

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

E. J. Finch, R. F. D. Carrier, Painfully Hurt When Car Wrecks His Buggy Near Inman.

Inman, Jan. 17.-In an accident on the Southern railroad here yesterday morning about 7.45 o'clock, E. J. Finch, R .F. D. carrier, was painfully hurt. His buggy is a complete wreck. in different camps. It seems a miracle that he should Would amend the dispensary act so have escaped, especially since the that a majority of the white citizens vehicle in which he was riding was may have a license system of saloons specially prepared for this kind of under strict regulations, instead of business, being small places on each the dispensary or prohibition. This, side for entrance and exit. One of he says, is the only true form of Dethese openings saved his life, but no mocracy. one knows how:

His buggy was struck by some cars and attempts to rape public. from above the crossing that had The governor makes a general recbeen set in motion by the momentum ommendation for economy, and says of one car which had been "punched that he had rather have a poor govin" in shifting.

the horse acted as a pivot and threw He closed his address with a prayer him from the track when the buggy for the people of the State and an was struck. He was thrown about 20 apostrophe to the Diety, feet. The horse escaped injury, prominent in church work, Ralph Riley, the young negro who shot Norman Whittenberg near Gaffney some days ago, has been placed the effects of the wound.

BLEASE'S INAUGURAL SPEECH

"GREATEST POLITICAL VICTORY IN THE HISTORY OF THE STATE," SAYS BLEASE.

Address Typical of Man Who is Now Sheehan against the field. This sums Newspapers-Platform Outlined.

Special to The Daily Item.

of action, an abiding trust in and de- and Platt in 1881 the legislature of voted love for God won for me the New York faces a deadlock on this greatest political victory that has yet question. been recorded in the history of South The senate and assembly balloted Carolina," Governor Coleman Living- separately today, but neither gave any ston Blease of Newberry. Tuesday af- candidate the majority required for a ternoon delivered the most notable in- choice. augural address that has ever been The first joint ballot will be taken which old time navigators used kins of Batesburg, the reading clerk Littleton and D. Cady Herrick. of the house of representatives.

from him any account of their conver- most solid weekly and semi-weekly remaining five voted for Mr. Shepard sation prior to the inexplicable mishap press, pouring forth all kinds of falseto the wheel. He examined a couple hoods, vituperation and abuse, re- with the pledge taken by the 21. Mr. isters of the gospel-God save the after the first joint ballot tomorrow. things is quiet," he said, nodding to mark!-who stood behind their pul-Hozler confidentially. "I'll tell you pits and gave vent to envy and malice called, are led by Senator Franklin wot I fancy. A rat dragged a bit of and slanders of the most virile and D. Roosevelt, a young millionaire of malicious nature against me* * * ali of these, combined with others, making a set of political characterthieves, the meanest and most contemptible people known to man."

Governor Blease singled out the ship, an' oo'd credit it? Not a soul. Columbia State from among the oth-They'd all say, 'Jimmie threw 'er er papers for his choicest epithets, although he did not fail to pay his respects to The Daily Record, Charleston News and Courier and all other bly clear after the joint ballot tomorpapers which opposed his election as row." sawing and hammering during the governor. Over two and one-half whole of the next two days, for the columns of his six and one-half columns are devoted to the newspapers. them and included all in his general

After concluding his discussion of nor closed his address with an apostrophe to the Diety, to whose goodness he ascribed in large measure his remakable victory at the polls.

In his address Mr. Blease merely water on board had acquired the color repeated parts of his platform, as announced at the beginning of the campaign last summer. His principal recommendations are:

Honest administration of all laws

Obedience to the constitution of Keeping separate and distinct the legislative, judicial and executive de partments of government.

Trial by jury for all persons accus-"Not me!" said Watts. "I don't like ed of crime. He considers "govern-

Biennial sessions of the legislature, Liberal appropriations for Confederate veterans and State institutions of learning, but thinks the legislature "Does it?" growled Coke, who seem- has been too extravagant in its appropriations to educational institutions.

Opposes the use of white people's taxes to educate negroes.

Recommends marriage license law

Favors having mileage pulled on trains, as the present "system of ticket collection is abominable." He calls attention to the cocaine evil, would prohibit the sale of cigarettes, would prohibit boys under sixteen years from smoking them, would outlaw toy guns and pistols and prohibit boys under sixteen years having guns in their possessions or owning them.

Recommends that each judicial circuit be allowed a representative on the board of regents of the State hospital for the Insane.

Would have white convicts worked

Would make executions for rape

ernment and a rich people than a The theory of his escape is that rich government and a poor people.

Mr. Finch is a very quiet man, but Mr. Ballinger's own opinion is somewhat open to question in view of the prependerating percentage of opinion against him.

in jail. Whittenberg has died from went to call on her, Cleveland thought she was going to be stung.

NEW YORK FACES DEADLOCK.

It Seems to be Shechan Against Field, With Some of Insurgents Very Determined.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 17 .- William F. Governor of The State-Denounces the situation tonight after the first day of legislative balloting for United States senator to succeed Chauncev M. Depew, and for the first time Columbia, Jan. 17 .- Declaring that since the bitter fight that followed independence of thought, freedom the resignation of Senator Conklin so ready to forget such a vital defect heard in the State. Nearly one-half at noon tomorrow and if Mr. Sheehan of his address was taken up in a de- holds all the legislators who voted for nunication of the South Carolina him today he will lead the field with press, the other part being devoted to 91 votes. Five members were absent a discussion of issues, all of which today. Of the remaining 105 votes, 79 were discussed in the campaign last were Republicans. The other 26 summer. As Governor Blease was Democrats divided their votes among too ill to render the speech himself, Edward M. Shepard, Alton B. admired the cluster of stars it was read for him by Mr. S. M. Sim- Parker, James W. Gerard, Martin W.

Of the 26 Democrats who voted In the introductory of his speech against Mr. Sheehan today 21 have Gov. Blease said: "Aligned against me solemnly pledged themselves not to were a united daily press and an al- abandon their stand. Three of the today and resolved to be in sympathy ceiving the assistance of a number Sheehan's opponents declared today of men who called themselves min- that five of his 91 votes would desert

The insurgents, as they have been Duchess county and a distant relative of Former President Roosevelt. This evening they renewed their mutual pledges.

Efforts to induce Gov. Dix to declare for some candidate continued today, but the governor reiterated his refusal to interfere. Tonight he made this statement, however:

"I think the atmosphere will proba-

COURT AT MANNING.

He quoted freely from a number of Heavy Docket Faces General Sessions Court Next Week.

> Manning, Jan. 17.-The Court of general sessions for Clarendon county will convene here next Monday, with Judge J. W. Devoe, of the 14th circuit, presiding. This will be Judge Devoe's first term at this place and he will find himself confronted with a rather heavy docket, including two murder cases, three for assault and battery, seventeen for liquor selling and a number of others charging various offences.

The law library and office furniture belonging to the late Joesph F. Rhame, Esq., were sold at auction yesterday, realizing a total of about $2,000. A practically complete set of South Carolina Reports, both old and new series, sold for $933.

New Orleans and San Francisco are acting as if the Panama Canal is to run down their main streets.

The man is made of the right stuff who will call the bluff of the one who doubts his ability; a man with ability all things can do in the face of every doubting hoodoo.

It's a delight to feast on Nunnally's candies because they are so good and pure and fresh.

She knows—all women know—that Nunnally's are the highest grade candies made in the South.

are shipped us by fast express. They're the freshest, as well as the choicest money can buy.

W. W. SIBERT.

Piano Tuning,

Mr. Edmund R. Murray offers his services to those who need an expert and experienced Piano and Organ tuner and repairer. References fur-Just because our beehive committee nished and work guaranteed. Address EDMUND R. MURRAY,

Sumter, S. C.