A Marriage.

Cards are out announcing the marriage on Thursday, June 11, Miss Mary Goodwyn Smith, of Glenn Springs, to Dr. Henry McCall Holmes, of Union.

Dr. Holmes is a young business man of Union that has made many friends since his coming here a few years ago. He is in the drug business and knows how to run a wide-awake establishment. We extend our congratulations and best wishes.

James Mobley Hill.

On the morning of the 26th of May, 1903, James Mobley Hill, of Carlisle, South Carolina, a true and faithful soldier of the Southern army, crossed over the river to join his comrades on the other shore.

It was only a lad, between the age of eighteen and nineteen years, when he joined the DePass Light Artillery. The young he was brave, and discharged his duty like a veteran. He loved his special gun as if it were his man. He and the Captain became close friends and he remained in his company until it was disbanded. A husband and father he was patient, loving and tenderly considerate to a degree rarely equalled and never surpassed.

In our hearts his memory with those of our Southern patriots will, for all time, be held with veneration. "They are"—I quote from Mr. Adams—"like Sibylline leaves, the fewer they became the more precious they are."

LETTER FROM THE WEST.

Chickasha, I. T., June 7, 1903.

Dear Editor:

This is an inspiring thought, this good Sabbath day.

Enthusiasm has prompted this feeble pen. The sad and pleasant memories intermingled bring about an everlasting consolation which time cannot efface. As the days go by we are still more mindful of the past and to know what fortunate mortals we are. How will we have escaped the ravages of time, and how pleasant to be so situated. Forty-two years ago we made our first step to Marshall music; then yet in our teens. But Father Time has dealt kindly with us. The feet that made the quick step in those early days of our life have grown older and slower; though many of them are still active and full of life.

Well, Mr. Editor I will try to give you some of the particulars of my trip to the great reunion at the Crescent City. I left my home on the night of the 15th of May, arriving at Ft. Worth, Texas, next morning at 8 a. m. Changing cars at 9 a. m. for New Orleans our ride through East Texas gave a fine view of both sections of that great State. Black land and rolling prairie, pine hills, nice little farms, fruits and vegetables. Next morning being Sunday, the king of day broke forth his brightest rays on our rattling ride through North Louisiana, that beautiful land of flowers; the lovely cane and nice farms, the most fertile on God's green earth. While we enjoyed that morning ride so much; still sadness mingled with pleasure. As we sped along overlooking that great scope of country still being overflowed from one of the breaks in the levee of the Mississippi. That was a melancholy sight to see the great sugar houses standing in water and not a living soul about the premises; no sign of life, not even the chirp of the birds. Our train ran slowly along over this part of the country giving ample time to view this sad scene. The breaking of the levee has cost many thousands of dollars, not only the tilable lands, but the sum of $150,000 had been paid out in trying to stop it. Here sorrow mingled with pleasure again, but pleasure overbalances the sorrow and we move on serenely, and all is lovely. And as we meet the boys on the way who are passing from car to car looking for some of his old comrades whom he had not seen since the war closed. Oh how these big hearted men would clasp the hand of each other, "And how are you John? God bless you, I am so glad to see you. We have not met since we parted at Appomattox." Oh what delightful experiences these are at this late day, and many are such at these great reunions. We arrived at our destination about 10 a. m. There we finally realized that the Mississippi river has the proper name. I stood on the ferry boat and with a careful glance of the eye saw that the river's surface is above the general landscape of the country. The tops of the houses in the town of Algiers are nearly on a level with the water in the river.

We took special notice that the levee had been broken at this particular place. But short notice and quick action with plenty of sand bags stopped the break before much damage was done. When cross the river and at Union depot alighted and took foot passage up town. By 2 o'clock dinner was over and now for taking in the sights of the city. First to Jackson Square, thence to Memorial Hall. I do think that every man who espouses the cause for which so many gave their life's blood should visit this noted place. But our stay was a little short. The opening hours on Sunday being less than week days, though I made good use of the time. I copied Gen. Ben Butler's general order No. 28, which I will give in the future if I live.

All the sight seeing by daylight I thought to make the time good and profitable. A sermon by one of the city's noted divines would be helpful, so I went to hear the son of one of our great and good men who has gone to his reward. Dr. Palmer was one of the noblest of his days. We had heard him in our reunions and thought he was above the average speaker. But he has gone where sorrow can never come.

After services we beat a hasty retreat to our room, there to get a good night's rest and be ready for the next day. Monday morning found us hale and hearty and to get the most of our time and money's worth, we started out early. And then began the great reunion. Our old comrades by 10 o'clock were arriving in the city and from every point of the compass. And at every turn of a corner greetings of the very warmest nature. The old battle scared veterans actually hugging and great drops of tears of joy running down their furrowed cheeks. General rejoicing was the order of the day. And as to your humble servant, I shed tears too, and had a genuine love feast from Monday until Friday. God bless these old Rebel soldiers, may they all enter in at the straight gate. The old adage says, "self praise is half scandal," but I must say that extremes of weather never have as yet stopped me from helping the old Rebel when in my power to do so. I never forget to doff my hat to a worthy old Rebel.

In my next I shall endeavor to tell you how New Orleans took care of the boys. I will also send the bill of fare for the whole week.

GEORGE G. BUCHANAN.

Letter to J. C. Hunter, Union, S. C.

Dear Sir: Most mixed paints are either adulterated or short measure. Devote Lead and Zinc is neither, so it cannot be classed with mixed paints. That's why it takes fewer gallons of Devote to paint a house, than it does of mixed paint and it lasts longer for the same reason. Ferguson & Thompson's store, Delhi, N. Y., was painted some years ago with thirty two gallons of mixed paint. Painted it last spring with Devote Lead and Zinc—thirteen gallons did the work. Devote Lead and Zinc is here or will be here very shortly. Spread the good news Yours truly, F. W. DEVOTE & Co. New York.
