Every family benefits from ICE

Every family in this community, whether aware of it or not, benefits some way from ICE. Foods transported from one part of the country to another receive the con-tant protection of ICE in refrigera-

To break this long line of ICE protection is false economy. Food should be kept well refrigerated from the noment it is received until prepared for the table. The cost of ICE is only a few cents a day, but the service it renders cannot be measured in dollars and cents.
