and cannot do exercises that are necessary for their recovery.

Hypnosis helped some of the patients who had required force feeding to develop good apetites. It made pain disappear so that they 'ould exercise their burne ! limbs and walk again. In such cas es the patient may still be far from well, but he regains his hope and confidence, and that's half the battle. He is able to cooperate in the treatment needed to restore him to health.

Hypnotic treatment was almost oo successful in some cases. One patient, who had not been able to vacreise his burned hands because of the pain, under hypnotic sugrestion did his exercises constantly

It took skilled medical specialists bout an hour and a half to put patient into his first hypnotie trance. After that, the suggestions were repeated daily in trances which took only minutes. Within a few days, the suggestions made during the trances began to take rold. The hypnotized patients decloped enormous appetites a n d heir feelings of pain were lessened. Some patients, however, were esistant to hypnotic suggestion. and so could not be helped at all by this technique.
