SERGEANT MCCLINTOCK.

"OVER THERE"

The Thrill and the Hell of the Trenches, Described by an American Boy.

Sergeant Alexander McClintock of Lexington, Ky., and the Canadian Army has Greeting Tale That Every American Will Read. For He Tells the Facts—Unadorned. Wounded, a Distinguished Conduct Medal Man, He Was Invalided Home, but is Going "Out There" Again to Fight For Uncle Sam and His Allies. An Inspiring, Interesting, Personal Narrative, Full of the Spirit and Atmosphere of the Trenches.

No. 1. In Training

By Sergeant Alexander McClintock, D. C. M., 87th Overseas Batt., Canadian Gren. Guards.

FOREWORD.

Here is a literary product which is at once an adequate example of the force of simple realism in the description of things which are difficult of ordinary comprehension, and a handbook and guide for every prospective soldier of our armies.

Sergeant McClintock has not written stories about the war. He has written the year itself, reducing it, one night almost sea, to words of his syllable, yet bringing to the reader's view, clearly and vividly, the various aspects of the great struggle, hidden to all except the man who is actually a part of it. His contribution to the history of the war must be classed as one which shines with a new light.

It is fascinating in its simplicity, yet thrilling in its concluding detail. It leads me, with ever-growing and compelling interest, from a casual conversation in a hotel in New York through scenes of strife and blood and thrilling conflict to the moment when the King and Queen of England came to the bedside of a Kentucky youth in a London hospital to thank him in the name of their nation for his services in the cause which we have now come to recognize as that of world humanity.

Sergeant McClintock received the Distinguished Conduct Medal before leaving England for home on leave. He is returning to accept a commission in the Canadian Overseas forces. The story is told in McClintock's own unadorned way.

I DON'T lay claim to being much of a writer, and up till now I have never felt the call to write anything about my experiences with the Canadian troops in Belgium and France, because I have realized that a great many other men saw quite as much as I did and could beat me telling about it. Of course I believed that my experience was worth relating, and I thought that the matter published in the newspapers by professional writers sort of missed the essentials and lacked the spirit of the "ditchies" in a good many ways in spite of its excellent literary style, but I didn't see any reason why it was up to me to make an effort as a war historian until now. Now there is a reason, as I look at it. I believe I can show the two or three millions of my fellow countrymen who will be "out there" before this war is over what they are going to be up against and what they ought to prepare for personally and individually. That is as far as I am going to go in the way of excuse, explanation or comment, call it what you will. The rest of my story is a simple relation of facts and occurrences in the order in which they came to my notice and happened to me. It may start off a little slowly and jerkily, just as we did, not knowing what was coming to us. I'd like to add that it got quite hot enough to suit me later several times. Therefore, as my effort is going to be to carry you right along with me in this account of my experiences, don't be

CANADIANS SCORE ANOTHER SUCCESS

British Front in Flanders and Belgium, Aug. 21 (By the Associated Press).—The fierce battle which began at dawn today on the outskirts of the city of Lens continued throughout the day at close quarters and late this afternoon there was no indication in the intensity of the struggle between the attacking Canadians and the Germans.

The Canadians this morning fought their way forward with bombs and bayonets and occupied important enemy defenses north, northwest and southwest of the heart of the city and since then the Germans have been sending in waves after waves of infantry in desperate counter attacks.

The Canadians have held strongly and the Germans have suffered very heavy casualties, as they must have expected from the nature of their counterattacks, in which no thought is given to the cost in life.

The striking feature of the battle is in the fact that the German also had missed troops for a counter-attack at dawn against the newly acquired Canadian positions in the northwest outskirts of Lens and had actually started their advance when they were surprised by encountering the onrushing Canadians in No Man's Land. Both offensives had begun at the same hour but a heavy mist apparently hid the Canadians unaware of the Canadian preparations until the Canadians were upon them with the bayonets.

Brief but bitter fighting occurred in No Man's Land. The German officers tried to rally their men but the enemy infantry gradually fell back to their trenches. The Canadians rushed forward and began on the parapets, hurled masses of bombs down among great number of troops which had been collected for the attack. The Germans tried to see through the communication trenches but the Canadians jumped among them with bayonets and bombs killing many. The Canadians took up new positions to a depth of several hundred yards which they are holding against bitter counterattacks.

On the southeast the Canadians were equally successful after very heavy fighting in which the British artillery was brought into play. The most strenuous fighting has in the day was presided over by the center of the line west of Lens and on a little front near the left of the northwest positions but the whole line was a seething cauldron.

The Canadians have achieved their immediate objective by driving their lines still closer to the heart of the city and their goal across the German counter-attack line.

By today's action the Canadians have gained possession of many railway embankments and colliery sidings which afford excellent positions for either offensive or defensive operations.

The Canadian assault extended from the northwest of the environs of the city to positions in the southwest suburbs and as the Germans were already advancing to attack the Canadian defenses the fighting quickly assumed the character of one of the sanguinary conflicts which this battle seemed theater has seen.

A circular line around which the opposing forces are now fighting is drawn close about the city proper, where the Germans had fortified themselves in concrete celler and dugouts.

No estimate of casualties or prisoners is yet possible but captured Germans were beginning to arrive back of both fronts at an early hour.

MAKES BEGINNING IN FOOD SURVEY

Washington, Aug. 21.—A nationwide food survey, authorized under the first of the food laws recently enacted by congress, will be started immediately by the department of agriculture.

Plans for the census, announced tonight, show that it will cover nearly 100 items of food and will include supplies on the farms, in warehouses and stores and even the stock in the family pantry.

A quick survey will be taken first of the supplies of 18 of the principal articles of diet and probably can be completed in three or four weeks, to be followed by a complete census after the crops are gathered. All the figures will be as of August 31.

Information gathered by the department will be turned over to the food administration, which will base its operations largely on the statistics supplied. After the survey is finished monthly reports will be prepared on the supplies of the principal foods. The work will be carried on principally by the bureau of markets, the bureau of crop estimates, the bureau of chemistry and State relations service of the department. Both annual inventories and estimates will be employed. Estimates of the food and feed products on farms will be made for the whole country by the bureau of crop estimate through 35,000 field operators in the field.

Information regarding stocks in wholesale, jobbing, storing, manufacturing and other commercial establishments, including large retail houses will be obtained by requesting from each concern a statement of the exact amount of each of the various products held by it.

CHERAW CHRONICLE OUTFIT DESTROYED

Cheraw, Aug. 20.—About 1 o'clock Saturday night the building occupied by the Cheraw Chronicle was found to be on fire. The fire department quickly responded to the call, but such headway had been made by the flames that nothing could be saved but the walls. The entire printing plant, including two linotypes, is a loss. This, with the building, totals a loss of about $15,000. J. N. Stricklin, the proprietor is undecided whether to replace the plant or to discontinue. The good work of the fire department saved the adjoining buildings, not even the awnings being scorched or the glass broken. Mr. Stricklin's loss is partly covered by insurance.

MARION BOWEN WRITES FROM FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON

Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. Editor The Advertiser:

If you will kindly allow me space, I wish to say just a few words to my many friends in Chesterfield county.

I wish to say that I am not sorry that I joined the army. I did so contrary to the advice of many friends, but I believed then, as I well know now, that my country needed me. I joined early in order that I might train the quicker and thus be of service as early as possible. We expect to leave for France to try to see the kaiser about Sept. 1. I would like my friends to pray that I may make a brave and worthy soldier and that I may return safely.

Just one word to my boy friends. You will never know just how dear your mother is to you until you are called upon to leave her with the prospect of never getting back. My advice is, be good to your mothers while you can, then step over the line and do your duty by your native land. Marion Bowen.

NAVY TO DEPEND UPON DESTROYERS

Washington, Aug. 20.—Preliminary steps towards providing the navy with as many additional destroyers as American plants can turn out were taken by Secretary Daniels today at a conference with more than a score of shipbuilders, engine makers and representatives of other industries.

Information was submitted by the builders as to what they could do in the way of expanding their facilities taxed to the limit of their present capacity with destroyers already under construction.

The main question is to find factories for turning out the engines.

The destroyer has proved itself the most efficient and best destroyer because of its speed and seagoing qualities. The more destroyers that patrol ocean lanes the greater will be the safety of cargo craft and transports.

The average underwater speed of submarines is about ten knots. Steamers employed as troop ships make not less than 12 knots an hour, so that they need not fear underwater attack from the sea and with destroyer convoys to protect them almost only chance encounters with submarines which lie directly in their path are to be expected.
